QUIN VICENNIAL

A quarter century Class Anniversary! When we begin to measure our days out of Old Nassau in fractions of a century we must admit to having joined the old grads. The last time we published a Class book was twenty years ago. We had then a fair sprinkling of proud fathers among us. Today we have a small showing of the first crop of self-conscious grandfathers who will soon be eligible only for senior golf tournaments.

The Class of 1914 was the first to step out from Princeton into an exploding world. Every class before us was accorded some period of the customary handshaking and civil formalities in the ring before the bell sounded for the first round of our fight with Old Man Life. But not 1914! The world started handing us blows without preliminaries or waiting for instructions from the referee. Before some of us had unpacked at home the mementos of our days at Princeton, armies had mobilized and joined battle. The world has been teetering off balance ever since. What a quarter century of world P-rade our class has lived through!

We can fairly assert, I think, that the forces which have driven so many things apart have taught the members of Princeton's Class of 1914 the lasting values of the associations of true friends, and have cemented more strongly the bonds which keep us together. As for our spirit, we face the newer generation with heads up. We refuse to think that there are any problems before the world which the Class of 1914 cannot settle if we have a little time. Twenty-five years are not enough for the job. It took sixty-nine years for Rutgers to win its first—but why spoil this book with that? We know our 50th anniversary will find things better. Here's to the Class and to Old Nassau!

GAY YOUNG SOPH'MORES

Now vs. Then

The Inquiring Reporter stopped before a door lettered "TIME & TIDE. Grim Reaping Neatly Done" and knocked hesitatingly. "Come in!" called a voice. The reporter entered a small room where an old man sat sharpening a scythe; he looked up and smiled encouragingly through his luxuriant white beard. "Yes?" he said. "Speak quickly, please; I can wait for no man."

"I would like to speak to Time or Tide," replied the other. "I have some questions to ask about the Class of 1914 of Princeton." The old man nodded. "Tide has just gone out," he answered, "and won't be in for another six hours. But I'm his senior partner—old Father Time they call me—and I can give you all the information you want. Just a minute." Rising, he went to a cabinet and pulled out a large black disc which he inserted in a complicated piece of machinery standing at the side of his desk. "What's that?" inquired the Inquiring Reporter. "That's the 1914 Record," said Time. "You said you wanted it, didn't you? The voices you will now hear are those of Experience and History, so listen carefully."

In June of 1914 there were 390 names on the 1914 Class Roll; 358 men entered with the Class as freshmen, 22 came in as sophomores, and 10 joined up as juniors.

Today, there are 307. '14's undergraduate days were a mixture of what might be called the old and new Princeton; the Class was horsed, and horsed in turn; it came, not entirely unscathed, through two seasons of Election, Cannon and Baseball Rushes; it hopped Sophomore Logic, English Philology, Old Testament Literature, and Physical Geography with avidity in traditional style. But it did several other things that showed it had a touch of individuality: its freshman football team was the first to beat the Yale freshmen; it won three hockey and water polo championships; it gave to hockey the greatest player the game will ever see; it started the Pic, elevated the E.D.A., Lit, and Orphic Order to front rank positions in campus activities; it applied the Honor System to sitting in an absent brother's seat at lectures, and it abolished horsing. It witnessed the University's president assume the highest offices of state and nation; it heard his successor dramatically informed of his election; it said farewell to Stockton Axson and welcomed Alfred Noyes; it adopted beer suits as an old custom for senior class wear and ignored the tradition of caps and gowns for Sunday chapel in the spring of senior year; in the summers of sophomore and junior years it very largely went in for the Plattsburg idea of national preparedness against the unrest that was already stirring in the world. It was, in a way, the connecting link—or perhaps, missing link—between the old-time naïveté of college life and the generation that would regard “Collegiate” as an opprobrious epithet.

Two months after graduation Europe burst into flames, and before the final gun was fired four years later, the Class had 226 men in the U. S. service, 3 with the French and 2 with the British; 14 received decorations from the U. S., France, England, Belgium and Italy, 9 were cited for gallantry, and 8 were wounded. Death came to 7 while on active duty, and 2 have since died as a result of wounds they received. The example set by these men in giving so freely of their youth and the promise of their future received added lustre only as recently as 1934 when Hsu Kwong returned to his native China to offer his life in her defense against the revolutionists.

It was not until 1919 that the Class was able to square away to follow the normal careers on which its members had expected to embark five years before. Today 76 of the Class are in general business pursuits, 32 are lawyers, 24 are brokers, 23 are manufacturers, 22 are teachers, 21 are bankers, 20 persist in remaining C.I.'s., 17 will write insurance on anything, 15 are doctors, and the rest report themselves as follows: real estaters, 8; farmers, 7; publishing, advertising and ministry, 6 each; in government service, 5; journalists, 4; accountants and authors, 3 each; architects, art specialists, chemists, diplomats, and public utilitarians, 2 each; musicians, oil producers and Regular army officers, 1 each. (There are 3 National Guardsmen and 3 who hold commissions in the Officers' Reserve Corps.) Married members of the Class total 225; 26 have been widowed or divorced, with 19 remarriages. Class children add up to 475—236 boys and 239 girls, including five sets of twins. There are 3 Class grandchildren and 1 Class step-grandchild.

Class children have attended 50 prep schools and 29 high schools in preparing for college; in the cases of 6 prep schools and 14 high schools, this preparation was deemed inadequate by the fond papas, which may or may not be a significant sidelight on modern education.

As for their own education, past and present, most of the Class have found that their English courses have been most valuable in their present careers, with Economics a close second, and Math and History following in that order. English has again been of greatest use in most extra-business interests, with History, French, Economics, Math and Philosophy next in popularity; on the other hand, a majority of those who did not take Economics in college now wish to God that they had. Two-thirds of the Class would re-elect the same department they chose as undergrads, and of the one-third who would make a change 25% would elect Economics, with History, Public Affairs and Science the most popular choices of the rest.

Many '14ers have been and are prominent in municipal, state and national politics. Although no attempt at a definite political census of the Class has been made, 174 say they voted against President Roosevelt in 1936, and 43 voted for him; were he running for office today, 189 would vote against him, 25 for him and the ballots of 3 would be determined by who was running against him.

When 1914 left Princeton it bequeathed to the University certain specific recommendations for its future betterment. These included the abolition of chapel, setting fire to Dickinson, promoting good preceptors to professorships, getting a new Chem Lab, a Hockey Rink, a new football coaching system, and the return of benches to Nassau Street. The latter thoroughfare is still bare of benches, but daily chapel has been abolished, Dickinson has burned, preceptors have been made into profs, there is a new Chem Lab and Hockey Rink, and a new football coaching system. Does this major fulfillment of its desires satisfy the '14 brethren? It does not, in the light of a quarter-century of maturing judgment.

Nowadays, the Class is unanimous in feeling that Princeton's greatest needs are a new library and a course, or entire department, devoted to education in the practical procedure of modern business and industry.

That there is still a widespread belief that the safeguarding of American ideals and traditions is a precious heritage of citizenship is strongly evidenced by these sample suggestions for faculty consideration: "Require study by all freshmen of the Constitution and political history of the United States"—"A course is needed in the fundamentals of American history, followed by one on the Constitution, so interesting that the participant feels he must take active part for the rest of his life in local and national politics"—"A belief that ideas of government at variance with our own should be taught as information, but that our own form, our Constitution and our established order of society should be preached as a patriotic duty until such time as those old enough to vote change them by the ballot. In short, not to use academic freedom as a cloak for efforts to convince students that revolutionary changes in our society or government are desirable"—and, finally—"Oust radical, wisecracking professors and instructors." There is also a feeling that the faculty could be improved by offering larger salaries for younger instructors: "Let us have less brick and mortar and more brains for a change," and it might be a good idea to do something to "teach the undergraduates respect, courtesy, thoughtfulness, good manners and how to be gentlemen." One member of the Class states that he wouldn't go to Princeton today and will not send his sons there, but on the whole Old Nassau seems to be regarded as a pretty good place after all, and bids fair to remain so, provided "it doesn't try to ape the big state universities," "diminishes the country club spirit," and "maintains an unwavering determination not to be turned aside from its tradition as an humanistic university."

The matter of closer alumni contacts with the University has apparently given many members of the Class considerable food for thought. The far westerners naturally would like to see the University more often than they are now able to do; failing that, they and their Classmates generally would like to have more regional visits by Princeton representatives, from the football team to the president. Indeed, this idea is applicable very close to home, for one '14er complains from Connecticut, "Have the National Alumni Association put some pep into regional associations. I know there is such a thing in Connecticut but I never heard of it having a meeting or dinner of any kind." Two pertinent suggestions for the better expression of University interest in her sons are: "Reduce the price of football tickets" and "Help alumni get jobs." One other side of the question is: "I believe the alumni have too much control of the administration of Princeton." (The current president of the University, dean of Admissions, dean of the College, dean of the Faculty, and dean of the Graduate School are non-Princetonians.—Ed.) The consensus of opinion on this point would appear to be well summed up in the following statement: "I think Princeton and the alumni benefit greatly from the extremely friendly—almost family—relationship that exists between them at present. I think it is a warmer one than at any time since I have known it. But the administration of the University should continue to be free to operate, scholastically and athletically, in accordance with its best judgment, unhampered by the restrictions of the amateur, frequently sentimental, and nearly always personal predilections of the alumni individually, and as a whole."

1914 still has the same tallest and shortest and oldest and youngest members it had at graduation, and the then-average age of the Class of 22.5 years has progressed in the same ratio to the present average age of 47.5 years. And as you can see from the following comparisons of the Senior Elections of June, 1914, with those of twenty-five years later, the changes therein are relatively few:

D.21 CLASS D.21
 MEETING, TUESDAY Feb 14
 OFFICERS
 2 P.M.

FEBRUARY 14, 1911

Report of the SECRETARY

TO THE CLASS:

The Class Officers, chosen in the 1934 elections, took office September 1 of that year as required by the Class Constitution.

Previous to that date, a meeting of these officers was held with the outgoing officers for a general discussion of administrative activities. It was the sense of this meeting that the Class Council as then constituted was too unwieldy for proper functioning. The Council was thereupon disbanded and a Class Executive Committee substituted therefor. The following were appointed to this Executive Committee by the outgoing and incoming presidents: Messrs. Canda, deSelding, Goldsmith, Gale Hunter and MacMillan. A general résumé of the work of this committee follows:

The first meeting of the Executive Committee was held September 11, 1934, and these meetings have been held at frequent and regular intervals since that date, except during the summer months. President Adler has very generously permitted the use of his office and its facilities for these meetings.

The alterations to the Class House at 39 University Place having been completed, the Executive Committee authorized holding luncheons therein on the days of major football games in Princeton. This practice has been continued and has proved extremely popular with an increasing number of members of the Class. The refurnishing of the dining room and the modernization of the kitchen equipment in the house were accomplished under the direction of Tookie Goldsmith, who deserves the thanks of all the Class for his untiring work. The successful catering for these luncheons has been under the able direction of Burt Myrick.

To insure a continuity of effort and experience in the matter of holding Reunions, Gale Hunter was appointed permanent Reunion Chairman to hold office through our 25th Reunion in 1939. The wisdom of this move has been too apparent to need further comment here.

Class dues were set at $10 per year, as of September, 1934.

The annual Mid-winter Dinner of the Class in 1935 was held in the Class House on the evening of February 21. In 1936 the dinner was held in Kelly's restaurant in New York. Since that date the dinners have been held in the Lotos Club in New York, and have proved increasingly successful.

Because of their enthusiastic interest and cooperation in various Class activities which the Executive Committee had asked them to undertake, Messrs. Myrick and Wolf were added to the Committee, September 30, 1936.

In January 1937 the Executive Committee sponsored the candidacy of George F. Phillips for nomination for Alumni Trustee at Large, and he was so nominated.

On October 5, 1937, President Adler announced that he intended to endow a University Scholarship for the benefit of sons of 1914 and asked that the Committee select a name for this scholarship, other than his own. Immediate and unanimous vote of the Committee was in favor of identifying this munificent gift properly with the name of the donor. The Adler scholarship is administered by the Class officers (exclusive of President Adler), and Tookie Goldsmith.

In the spring of 1938 the Executive Committee appointed Ed MacMillan to represent the Class in memorial services for Hobey Baker, to be held in Princeton by veterans of the 101st Observation Squadron, A.E.F.

The chief activities of the Executive Committee for the past year have been largely concerned with arrangements for the 25th Reunion. Messrs. Beebe and George Brown have been added to the Committee to assist in this important work.

Due to the helpful interest of a great many members of the Class, it has been possible to include a column of Class notes for 1914 in every issue of the Alumni Weekly during the past five years. It is particularly gratifying that some of our more distantly located members have supplied data for these notes, so that items of more than local interest could be included in the column.

During the past five years to date, we have suffered the loss of eleven members, Messrs. Jenkins, Kwong, Carruthers, Carpenter, Rowland, Kennedy, Gordon, Long, Craig, Fielder, and Milliken.

Our Class Roll now lists 307 members.

Respectfully submitted,

A. C. M. Azoy,

WHO SAID THERE ARE NO MERMAIDS?

The CLASS

ADLER, JULIUS OCHS; 630 Park Ave., New York City: At graduation Julie said he was going to be a journalist; it is doubtful if anyone could have become much more of a journalist than he. His first stop after Princeton was Times Square, New York City, where he was given a job on The New York Times under the aegis of his uncle, the late Adolph Ochs, famous publisher of that paper. When war came, Julie was one jump ahead of the rest of us, for he already had his commission as second lieutenant of Cavalry, thanks to his active participation in Leonard Wood's Plattsburg camps in '15 and '16. He was soon promoted to captain, transferred to the Infantry and went abroad in command of H Company, 306th Infantry, taking part in actions in Lorraine, Vesle, Oise-Aisne and Meuse-Ar-gonne. In the process he was promoted to major, captured a German battalion practically single-handed, got himself gassed, and finished up on the receiving end of the Distinguished Service Cross, Order of the Purple Heart, Silver Star with Oakleaf Cluster and N. Y. Distinguished Service Medal from the United States; the Legion d'Honneur and Croix de Guerre with palm from France, and the Croce de Guerra from Italy. Returning home and to the Times, Julie married Barbara Stettheimer in 1922; they have three children, Julius Ochs, Jr. (14), now at Lawrenceville and headed for Princeton, Barbara Squier (10) and Nancy Jean (8). After the death of Mr. Ochs, Julie was appointed one of the three members of the Times' publishing committee, and assumed the duties of vice-president, general manager, treasurer and a director of the paper; he is also active in the subsidiary properties of the Times as a director in the Times Printing Co. of Chattanooga and the Spruce Falls Power and Paper Co. of Toronto, vice-president and treasurer and a director of Wide World Photos, Inc., of New York, and president and publisher of the Chattanooga Times. With all of this Julie has still found time to be a member of the Foreign Policy Association, National Security League, English-Speaking Union, League of Nations Association, American Academy of Social and Political Science, and the Lotos, Pilgrim, Princeton, Advertising and Century Country Clubs, to say nothing of a score of civic and philanthropic organizations ranging from Boy Scouts to disabled veterans. He has also continued his military interests as a colonel in the Infantry Reserve, commanding the 306th Infantry, and acts as civilian aide to the Secretary of War from the New York area. Mention here of Julie's constant and unselfish loyalty to '14 and its members is unnecessary; he was our vice-president for three successive terms from 1919 to 1934, has been our president since then, and last year climaxed his many acts of devotion in our behalf by endowing a Princeton scholarship for sons of members of 1914.

ALEXANDER, JOHN MacMILLAN; 1447 Milner Crescent, Birmingham, Ala.: After serving in the war as a first lieutenant in the Sanitary Corps, Alex took up post-graduate work for the ministry at the Virginia Union Theological Seminary. He received his bachelor's degree in divinity in 1921 and his D.D. in 1926. Meanwhile he had married Victoria Holladay in 1923; they now have three children, Victoria Holladay (13), Matilda Caroline (11), and John M., Jr. (7), who even at this early age is showing strong Nassovian tendencies. Alex is pastor of Birmingham's First Presbyterian Church, and is extremely active in local church and community work. He is president of the Birmingham Pastors' Union, vice-president of the Council on Coöperation of Social Forces, chairman of the Synod Committee on Home Missions, and a director of the Birmingham Sunday School Council, Christian Federation, and Kiwanis Club. He is also a member of the Assembly Committee on Stewardship and Finance, Home Mission Council, Committee on Evangelism of the Federal Council of the Churches of Christ in America, the Masons, Kappa Sigma, and the Alabama Policy Commission. And still he finds time to indulge his hobbies of golf and photography.

ALLING, ERIC L.; Keene, N. Y.: Medicine called Eric when he left Princeton and after serving as a private in the Medical Corps during the war, he obtained his M.D. from Columbia in 1919. His first marriage ended in divorce, and in 1931 he married Sara Bennett; he has a son, Doric (16), and a daughter, Judith (13). In addition to his regular practice he is consulting psychiatrist on the staff of the Trudeau Sanitarium, and is an active member of the American Medical Association and the American Association for the Advancement of Science. Eric's favorite hobby is chemistry.

ANDREWS, JEROME EDSON; Hidden Road, Andover, Mass.: Ed is vice-president and treasurer of the Gale Shoe Manufacturing Co., with a factory at North Adams, Mass., and an office in Boston, yet despite all this New England atmosphere he manages to keep the orange and black flying as high as the crimson and blue. He is his district's representative on the Graduate Council and a member of the Schools Committee of that august organization, and has done yeoman service in increasing the New England representation in the Princeton undergraduate body. Next to Old Nassau Ed's favorite hobbies are golf, sailing and traveling. He married Barbara Gale in 1918 and has a son and daughter, Jerome Edson, Jr. (13), who says he will enter Princeton with the class of 1942, and Barbara Gale (5). Ed was a Navy lieutenant in the war.

ARMOUR, WILLIAM; "Apple Tree Farm," Peapack, N. J.: Bill's business life is centered in the offices of Foster Marvin & Co., 2 Wall St., New York City, but at other times he is a country squire of New Jersey; his home in Peapack, remodeled from an old farm barn, is one of the beauty spots of the neighborhood and has received enthusiastic architectural comment. Bill married Dorothy Thacher in 1917 and during the war served as a lieutenant, junior grade, on the U.S.S. Madarwaska. He has no children.

ARMSTRONG, CHARLES VINCENT; Belle Haven, Greenwich, Conn.: Vince has consistently followed a merchandising career since 1914, with time out to be a Navy coxswain during the war and a short term as a broker thereafter. He is now treasurer and a director of the Southern Rice Sales Co., Inc., with offices in New York and Houston, Texas, and is also a director of the Peerless Weighing and Vending Machine Corporation. (For the benefit of Classmates with growing daughters, it should be added that Vince is honorary chairman of the Class Bachelors Association.) Besides golf, riding, photography, book collecting and fishing, Vince has maintained a lively interest in Class affairs; he was chairman of the 20th Reunion Committee and has served since 1934 as an extremely active vice-president of the Class.

ARMSTRONG, OWEN; 1366 Goodbar St., Memphis, Tenn.

AZOY, A. C. M.; 452 Ridgewood Road, Maplewood, N. J.: When he is not whipping up notes for the '14 column in the Alumni Weekly, our secretary puts in his time as an advertising and promotion counsel, with offices in New York City. He is also an instructor in advertising on the Columbia University faculty, lectures at the Maplewood Adult School, and is chairman of the Graduate Board of the Princeton Tiger. As favorite avocations he writes, sails, listens to Gilbert and Sullivan, and takes motion pictures which have frequently been used professionally. Five times Stas has blossomed out with books, "The Reserve Officer's Handbook" (McBride, 1927), "A Primer of Advertising" (Harper's, 1929), and three volumes of Princetoniana in collaboration with Frank Halsey '12, "Goal Lines," "A Curious Catalog of Princeton" and "The Princeton Almanac"; his other writings have appeared in Town & Country, the Times, New Yorker, Vanity Fair, Saturday Evening Post, etc., as well as a number of trade journals. During the war Stas was a first lieutenant with the 37th Heavy Artillery; he has maintained affiliation with the Officers' Reserve Corps and in 1931 landed practically on the heels of our publisher-warrior as a lieutenant-colonel in the Coast Artillery reserves. In 1918 Stas married Margaret Field Groves and they have one son, Philip Livingston (16), who will be Princeton '45.

BAKER, JAMES I.; 2132 East High Street, Springfield, Ohio: Jimmy deserves a place on our Roll of Honor. Like very few others of the brethren, he is the father of our No. 4 Class Twins, James Hugus Baker and Doorthea Black Baker, aged 6 years. Peter Black Baker, a year old April 3, 1939, completes the trio. Added to this, Jimmy has one wife, Clara, née Phelps, who took him for better or worse, and we would say better, in 1930. He was a corporal in the Air Service during the war. Jim now pursues the arts and sciences of peace as a manufacturer, and is president and general manager of The Safety GUILDING Wheel & Machine Company of Springfield, Ohio. He also belongs to the Rotary Club and the Springfield Country Club. Fishing, golf and boating take up Jimmy's spare time, if any.

BAKEWELL, ALLEN C.; 580 Park Ave., New York City: Bake was one of our ambassadors of good will to the Harvard Law School, taking his LL.B in Cambridge in 1917. During the war he was on the War Trade Board in Washington, D. C., and he is now associated with the legal firm of Cooper, Kerr & Dunham in New York. In 1917 Bake married Elizabeth P. Avery and their son, Thomas W. (19), is headed for Princeton. In addition to being a candid camera addict, Bake's chief outside interest is boating.

BALL, ALWYN, III; 180 East 79th St., New York City: Our first Class president (that may also be read "first-class" with equal appropriateness) captained a machine gun outfit in 1918. From this he escaped unscathed to enter the real estate business in New York, as a partner in the firm of Southback & Ball. Allie is now in for himself, heading a division of the 75 Maiden Lane Corporation, with offices at 25 Broad St. At other times he is usually either golfing or yachting. In 1920 he married Ethel Louise O'Donohue; their children are Sheila (17), a sophomore in Manhattanville College, and Priscilla (15), who will enter there with the Class of 1944.

BANNERMAN, PARRY E.; 568 Front St., Hempstead, N. Y.: Since graduation, Parry's business interests have been exclusively with the Murphy Varnish Co. of Newark, N. J. With equal exclusiveness, he has devoted his sportive hours to tennis, with a bow towards golf; on the courts of the Hempstead Country Club he has won the Club championship several times in both singles and doubles. He also won the Class doubles championship, by acquiring the Class Twins, Ruth Ogden and Lois Tiffany (18); Miss Lois is a junior in the Juilliard School of Music, where she is specializing in—or is it on?—the harp. His oldest daughter, Jean MacDonald (20), is now Mrs. Richard M. Hesselman. Parry married Marion Tiffany Marsh in 1917.

BARNES, BERNARD E.; 66 Abney Circle North, Charleston, W. Va.: Pete remains an ornament to, as well as a product of, the southland, returning to his native heath from Princeton, where he is in the insurance business with the firm of Galaher and Sutherland. His marriage to Dorothy Dyer took place in 1917, and fifteen years ago they became the proud parents of the No. 2 Class Twins, Mary Baker and Edwin Arnold. Their other children are Dorothy (21), who is a senior at Duke, and Jacqueline (19), a senior at Stephens.

BARRAS, WILLIAM AVERY; 434 Greenwood Avenue, Trenton, N. J.: Still one of our most eligible bachelors, Avery continues in that honorable profession of teacher which, with the exception of some time spent in library work, he has followed since graduation. For many years instructor and head of the Department of English at the Peddie School at Hightstown, N. J., he is now in a similar position at Montclair Academy, Montclair, N. J. In our senior year he was president of the Teachers' Club, and has proved the exception to the well-known rule enunciated by the late Mr. W. Shakespeare about following one's own teaching. Avery has no "organizational" affiliations; he does not even admit to any hobbies. He has, however, written two books, "Selections from the Poetry of Robert Browning," published by the Laurel Book Company of Chicago, in 1925, and "Tilting with the Windmill"—a book of essays delivered to a waiting world by Wilbur W. Merchant, Moscow, Idaho, about ten years after. During the war, Avery served as a private in the 38th Heavy Artillery.

BARTHOLOMEW, ORLO ALF, III; 12 Franklin Avenue, Northfield, N. J.: From Minneapolis, Minnesota, to Buffalo, Wyoming, to Northfield, New Jersey, might seem gigantic leaps even to a bullfrog with seven-league boots or to Benchley's Bounding Broomstick. But it was nothing to Bart. From the founding of the undergraduate shoe-shining establishment and the managing of the business side of the Prince to the saw-mills and lumbering of the Great North and Middle West, to the Federal Banks of Clearfield, Penna., and Atlantic City, N. J., he went with equal nonchalance, sangfroid, and customary capability. Returning to the East shortly before our 20th Reunion, the first one he was able to attend, Bart has been vigorously collecting and dehydrating the lost and scattered assets of the closed banks of America's premier Atlantic Coast resort. He can tell you, to the fraction, how much of a mortgage every hotel in the place has. Orlo A., while out in the formerly wild and woolly West, collected for himself one wife, Beulah Marie Adams, in the year 1924. The following have been added unto them: Robert E. (13), known as Bobby, Beulah Marie (11), and Laura Mae (10). Mr. B. modestly cites "model making" as his hobby. Let it be known that at this he is a mechanical wizard. The gentleman from Oz had nothing on him. His plans, specifications and designs for an improved transportation of freight into and in New York City are an accomplishment of a very high order. Perhaps he developed his well-known habits of concentration and speculative thought from his war days. Aloft in a balloon, with nothing to do but stay (technically termed ensign, Naval Aviation), he had plenty of time to meditate, for example, on the higher things of life and to ponder on the potentialities of the present.

BASS, WALTER H.; 439 St. Marks Ave., Westfield, N. J.: Walter, who was a Naval ensign in 1917, married Katharine Firey in 1918, and the family now includes William F., II (19), who is in Princeton in the Class of 1941; Cynthia Ann (17), Nancey Firey (15) and Walter H., Jr. (as he is only 8, his membership in Princeton '52 is cautiously followed with a question mark by his father). Walt is a broker, in the sales end of it, with A. M. Kidder & Co. of New York. For further comments, see cross-reference to Beyer, Henry H.

BAUHAN, ROLF WILLIAM; 1 Ober Road, Princeton, N. J.: With time off as an instructor in the Princeton Aviation School during the war, Roy has preached and practised architecture ever since undergraduate days. In 1920 he received his M.A. from Old Nassau and a year later his M.F.A., and now has not only his home but also his office in Princeton, where he has played a leading part in the development of the town's residential sections. He designed the Hun School buildings, the Alexander Smith and other outstanding residences and handled the remodeling work on our Class House. He holds active memberships in the American Civic Association, New Jersey Art Advisory Committee, American Institute of Architects, American Archaeological Institute, the Architectural League, Society of Beaux Arts Architects and the National Arts Club. He married Elizabeth Lathrop in 1927 and they have three sons, William Lathrop (9), Hobart Baker (8) and John Hun (6). Roy was Class treasurer from 1919 to 1924.

BEATTY, JOHN W., Jr.; Richland Lane, E. E., Pittsburgh, Pa.: John is another of the Class disappointments to American womanhood, for he is still as unattached as he was in June, 1914. During the war he served in the Navy and is now in the sales department of the Pittsburgh branch of the Connecticut Mutual Life Insurance Co. His extra-business interests and activities, when not involved with Princeton matters, are centered in the Duquesne Club.

BECK, JAMES MONTGOMERY; 1624 21st St., Washington, D. C.: Jim's musical talents led him into the Estey Organ Company after graduation, where he remained until the Big Parade, in which he served as first lieutenant in the Signal Corps. Since then he has spent most of his time abroad, and he still retains his business connections in London. His marriage to Adelaide Wilmerding in 1917 terminated in divorce; in 1928 he married the Honorable Clare Tennant in England. Jim has three children, Nina (20) and the No. 3 Class Twins, James and Virginia, who are 9. He is a director of Stereoscopic Processes, Ltd., Newman St., London W1, and a member of the Pilgrim Society and St. James's Club in London; in New York, Jim is on the rolls of the Knickerbocker and Racquet and Tennis Clubs. Music is still a paramount interest in his life.

BEEBE, JAMES WARREN; 51 So. Park St., Montclair, N. J.: Warren's first claim to fame after graduation was the establishment of a long-distance hospitalization record in the Army. As a private in the 312th Infantry he was on the receiving end of a direct hit of a major calibre German shell shortly before the Armistice; Warren was one of three members of his platoon that escaped alive, though badly smashed up. From then on he was a visitor to practically every military hospital in France, England and the United States, where his life and various parts of his anatomy were despaired of, one after the other. However, the ebullient Beebe spirit refused to give in and after more than two years of fooling doctors and undertakers Warren came back to civilian life practically as good as new. He is now sales representative of the Sawdon Co., Inc., 230 Park Ave., New York City, and has never married because he says he is afraid it would hamper his habit of listening to Wagnerian operas outside of business hours.

BEGER, JOHN H.; Wilson Place, Rumson, N. J.: Oddly enough, considering his place of residence, Johnny does not ride to hounds but chases a golf ball instead of a fox for exercise. He also chases stock quotations around New York's financial center, where he is a trader with J. R. Timmins & Co., 61 Broadway. Johnny married Viola Holmyard in 1923; they have no children.

BELTZHOOVER, MELCHIOR ROCH; "Green Leaves," Natchez, Miss.: After leaving campus life, Beltz took a position with the Britton and Koontz Bank in Natchez, attaining the rank of vice-president therein; he has since retired. Beltz married Ruth-Audley Britton Wheeler in 1917, and their children are Melchior (20), who is a sophomore at Tulane; Ruth-Audley Britton (17) and Virginia-Lee (12). Unfortunately, the famous Mercer racer is no more.

BEYER, HENRY H.; 635 Hyslip Ave., Westfield, N. J.: Hank closely resembles Walter Bass in his career and in his reticence. Like Walter, he is a silent broker; though, unlike Walter, he does confess to a secret avocation or two. Golf and swimming can lure him from the stock ticker on occasion. He is the owner and whole works in Henry Beyer & Co. of Newark, N. J., so no wonder there is occasional time off. The Beyer family consists of Ruth O. Kaas, whom Henry acquired by marriage in 1917, and Ross H. (20), in Princeton in the Class of 1941; Edith (19), Wellesley 1940; Ralph D. (17), headed for Princeton 1945, and Marian A. (14), ditto for Wellesley 1946.

BILLINGS, GEORGE M.; 39 Plaza Street, Brooklyn, N. Y.: Josh changed his collegiate color scheme from orange and black to blue and white after graduation, and took his LL.B. at Columbia in 1917, following this with service in the legal advisory service of the War Department. He is a member of the American Bar Association and the Association of the Bar of the City of New York, and is an associate in the legal firm of Cravath, de Gersdorff, Swaine and Wood of New York City. Josh married Josephine A. Swift in 1927; they have no children. Next to Blackstone, Josh's favorite author is Izaak Walton, whose angling adjurations he follows whenever possible.

BIRD, CYRUS REMINGTON; 16186 LaSalle Boulevard, Detroit, Mich.: You could tell (if you were a "C. I.") that Rem is a civil engineer, for he prints out the good old letters in his reliable answers to our Questionnaire. Rem is district manager for The Pitometer Company, engineers, at 50 Church St., New York City. He is a member, in good standing, we presume, of the American Society of Civil Engineers, and likewise in his Masonic affiliations. Rem married Helen McIntyre in 1923, and they have one child, a daughter, Marcia Marian (8). Prior to matrimony, Rem served as a major in the Field Artillery. What with Rem and Henry Ford and Fritz Crisler and other celebrated men of our day in the State of Michigan, we shall expect big things therefrom, and we know that Rem, for one, will not let us down.

BISWANGER, BENJAMIN E.; 5032 Saul St., Philadelphia, Pa.: It is with deep regret that we have to announce that Ben recently suffered a severe illness which has necessitated his complete withdrawal from all social and business activities.

BLACKBURN, JAMES B.; 322 Richland Lane, Pittsburgh, Pa.: For twenty-five years Jim has been vainly trying to lead a short cheer for George Phillips, but he has found time for other activities as well. In 1917 he married Anna Louise Miller, then saw war service as a second lieutenant in the 310th Field Artillery, later was admitted to the Bar, took his LL.M. from Harvard in 1931 and is now a professor of law in the University of Pittsburgh. The Blackburns have three sons; James B., Jr. (19) and Oliver M. (16) are Princeton-bound in the Classes of 1942 and 1944, respectively, but William B. (8) is going to wait until his brothers are safely out of the way and expects to enter with the Class of '53. Outside of bullying Blackstone, Jim's favorite occupations are gardening and golfing, being careful to confine his digging to his home loam and leaving the fairways unexcavated.

BLAIR, PAXTON; 433 East 51st St., New York, N. Y.: There is no denying that our friend Pax is one of us who has increased mightily—literally and/or figuratively—since we all left Princeton and he was an infantry shave-tail. As Assistant Corporation Counsel of the City of New York (since 1934) he is in charge of the Division of Appeals and so has to spend half his time in Albany and Washington telling the top-notch courts of the land how they should decide cases. He got himself in shape—figuratively, of course—for all this by taking his LL.B. at Harvard in 1917, and keeps the scholarly hand in by contributing to the Harvard Law Review, Columbia Law Review, American Bar Association Journal and other similar publications. His organizational affiliations in ascending or descending order of importance are Phi Beta Kappa, American Bar Association and the New York Young Republican Club. He married Gertrude H. Grosvenor, 1925, and has three children, Joan Grosvenor (12), E. A. Grosvenor (10), and Joseph Paxton, III (5). His outside activities include travel, dancing, and reading history and travel. We also happen to know that he holds a mean conversational advantage over most people when Modern Art gets discussed. Pax's office is in the N. Y. Municipal Building; his room number has a typical Paxton touch: "Just remember the year of the signing of the Solemn Pact and Covenant in Edinburgh, that's it." (For the benefit of the ignorami among '14ers, the answer is 1638.)

BLEECKER, B. DeWITT; Syosset, N. Y.: DeWitt helped win the war as a Marine second lieutenant, and in 1928 married Ruth Eleanor Hall; they have two daughters, Patricia Hall (8) and Maey DeWitt (1½). DeWitt's chief hobby is gardening, and during business hours he goes in for public utility work with the Columbia Engineering Corp., at 61 Broadway, New York City.

BLEECKER, THEODORE B.; 439 East 51st St., New York City: Ted has become a merchant, and is sales manager of the mercantile firm of Bleecker and Simmons, 90 Front St., New York. Also, as might be expected of an ex-ensign, he goes in avidly for cruising; when not thus vacationing, he is fondest of golf. He is a member of the Naval Order of the United States, the Princeton Club of New York, and the National Republican Club; in 1934 he was appointed a member of the N. Y. County Republican Committee, on which he still serves. In 1922 Ted married Winifred Merrill; they have no children.

BOL, CORNELIS; Route 1, Box 532, Palo Alto, Cal.: Ill health forced Nel to withdraw from Princeton in junior year and move to Montana. By the following fall he had so improved that he effected a transfer to Montana University and took his B.S. degree there in 1914. The next two years Nel spent as an assistant in physics in Leland Stanford, working toward his M.A. and Ph.D. He married Corrie Barentsen in 1916 and went to Holland for the summer, but the war prevented him from coming back to the United States to finish his post-graduate work. As a result, Nel spent the ensuing twenty years in the Holland factory of the Philips Glow Lamp Co., doing engineering research work in the radio and lamp fields. He came over here again in 1936 and is now a consulting engineer for the General Electric Corporation as well as a research associate in physics at Stanford. Nel has obtained some fifty patents on his radio and lamp inventions. The sodium lamps now in use in this country were developed by him and at present he is working on further improvements in the high pressure capillary mercury lamps which he invented in 1934. For relaxation, Nel goes in for swimming, painting and drawing, and is a member of the American Physical Society and Teachers Association. His first wife died shortly after their marriage and in 1924 Nels married Josina Johanna den Haan; he has five children, Kees (14), Klaas (12), Piet (10), Joor (8) and Morris (2½). The latter was named after our old friend, Prof. Morris Croll, and Nel hopes he will go to Princeton.

BOLMER, WILLIAM B.; Rocky Hill, N. J.

BOLTON, F. NELSON; Owings Mills, Md.: Together with most of the rest of our original Baltimore contingent, Nels remains true to his native land and is now manager of the Baltimore branch of the brokerage firm of G. M.-P. Murphy of New York. His favorite recreation is shooting, which is all right for a stock broker provided he does not permit market breaks to persuade him to train his gun on himself. Nels married Mary Harrison Thompson in 1916; they have three sons and one daughter. The two oldest boys, Robert H. (21) and Gough W. T. (20), are students at Johns Hopkins and University of Virginia, respectively; Nelson (18) and Mary Ames (6) are still without collegiate attachments.

BONNER, KENNETH; Redding Ridge School, Redding Ridge, Conn.: Having been a two-fisted shave-tail in the Infantry, an entertainer and raconteur par excellence, and a lawyer, Ken might have gone on to professional fame in any of those vocations. Instead, he turned teacher. Leaving Harvard with an LL.B. in 1920, Ken became an instructor in Princeton's history department, where he later attained the rank of assistant professor. He then left to accept a post of master in St. James's School, Maryland, where he remained for several years, doubling in brass as tennis and football coach. The experience and constant contact with boys convinced Ken that studies could be made more appealing, and a new curriculum devised that would secure better and more lasting intellectual results. These convictions led him, in 1937, to establish Redding Ridge School, where he is headmaster, and where his system of education is attracting wide interest and favorable reaction from educators and parents. Long a leader in our bachelor brigade, Ken married Louise A. Smith in 1928.

BOYD, JACKSON H.; Southern Pines, N. C.: After serving in the war as a captain of Field Artillery, Jack married Harriet McCook in 1920 and their two boys, John (17) and Alexander (13), are both pointed toward Princeton in the Classes of 1944 and 1949, respectively. Jack is occupied in the business of estate and investment management, and of recent years he and his family have maintained their home in Southern Pines. As president of the Watch Hill Orchard Co., he is very much interested in farming and fruit growing. For recreation, fox hunting holds first choice with Jack, but probably not with the foxes.

BRIGGS, THEODORE C.; Pittsford, N. Y.: Ted has never gotten the water of Lake Carnegie out of his veins and has continued to follow the sea ever since he hung up his stroke oar in 1914. During the war he was a lieutenant (J. G.) in the Navy and was serving on the destroyer Jacob Jones when that ill-starred vessel was cut down by the Aquitania, for whom she was acting as convoy. For his heroism in that catastrophe Ted was awarded the Navy Cross. Since then Seaman Briggs has restricted his nautical adventuring to the more peaceful fields of yachting, both motor and sail. (Indeed, he once did a little land cruising as well, taking his family on a trailer tour of the West.) When Ted is not on the quarterdeck, he may be found in the office of vice-president and sales manager of the Lawyers Coöperative Publishing Co. of Rochester, N. Y., or in a directors' meeting of the Rochester Trust & Safe Deposit Co., the Rochester Capital Corporation, or the Bancroft Whitney Co. of San Francisco. From 1933 to 1934 he served as City Manager of Rochester. Ted married Ruth Curtis in 1918 and they have four children, William H. (19), who is a Princeton freshman; Barbara H. (17), Catherine C. (14) and Joseph C. (8).

BRINTON, WILMER, JR.; 512 Cathedral St., Baltimore, Md.: Brint took an A.B. from Johns Hopkins in 1915 and a captaincy from the U. S. Infantry in 1918. In 1925 he married Florence McAnerny. He is now a partner in the Baltimore insurance firm of Carr and Brinton, Inc., and was appointed by Governor Ritchie of Maryland to serve on the Baltimore Police Board from 1929 to 1935. Brint also holds official appointments as steward and judge on the Horse Racing Commissions of Maryland, Massachusetts, West Virginia and New York. When not following the bangtails, his chief relaxation is bridge. The Brintons have no children.

BROOKS, OLIVER R.; 845 Park Ave., Elizabeth, N. J.: The Class owes a debt of gratitude to Ollie Brooks of no mean proportions. As our treasurer for two terms, from 1924 to 1934, it fell to his lot to safeguard our finances through practically every variety of economic acrobatics, and when he was finally permitted to lay down his ledgers they contained much more black ink than red. Such monetary wizardry has found its just reward in Ollie's present position as assistant trust officer of the Guaranty Trust Company of New York, with which organization he has long been connected. Outside of banking hours Ollie's chief avocations, which he manages to keep non-conflicting, are golf and an active interest in St. James Church in Elizabeth. He married Helen L. Baker in 1917; they have no children. During the war Ollie enlisted in the Coast Artillery and was a student officer at the time of the Armistice.

BROWN, BENJAMIN B.; 127 Alderson St., Charleston, W. Va.: Ben went from Princeton to Harvard Law (where he was a member of Acacia) and took his LL.B. there in 1917. In the same year he married Hesten M. Newhall. When the war broke out, Ben broke into it via the Marines and on his return home entered the practice of law; he is now a partner in the firm of Brown, Jackson and Knight, Kanawha Valley Building, Charleston. Besides his legal duties, he is a director in the Kanawha Valley Bank, Central Trust Co. and the Lewis Land and Coal Co., as well as property trustee of the Kanawha Presbyterian Church; from 1925 to 1926 he served as a member of the House of Delegates in the West Virginia Legislature. Ben's other interests include the West Virginia and American Bar Associations, Chamber of Commerce, Edgewood Country Club, and the Masons (chapter, commandery and shrine). There are four Brown children, Gertrude Woodbridge (19), who is a Smith sophomore; James Frederick (18) and Princeton '42; Benjamin B., Jr. (15), and Elizabeth Newhall (13).

BROWN, GEORGE RUSSELL; 465-A Halsey St., Brooklyn, N. Y.: Bus was a Navy yeoman during the war, and ever since has been doing yeoman service in the interests of Princeton in general and the Class in particular. (He is probably the only reunion fee collector in captivity who retains his popularity with the collectees.) In honor probably of the degree of B. Litt., which he received at graduation, Bus is a bachelor and lists "reading" as his favorite indoor sport. Out of doors he is all for swimming, canoeing and tennis.

BRUCE, JAMES; Eccleston, Md.: Jim, having served as Class president for the second term of freshman year and vice-president in senior year and for the five years thereafter, has steadfastly continued the executive tenor of his ways and is now vice-president of the National Dairy Products Co., New York City. He is also a director of the Republic Steel Corporation, Commercial Credit Co., Standard Gas and Electric Co., Panhandle Producing and Refining Co., American Air Lines, Maryland Casualty Co., Federal Home Loan Bank, Bayway Terminal Co., and Rock Island Railway Co. After graduation Jim took his LL.B. at the University of Maryland in 1917, and then served in the war as a captain with the 15th Field Artillery. After the Armistice Jim engaged in banking in Baltimore and New York, later going to Washington on the Federal Loan Home Bank Board for a few years before assuming his present duties. He married Helen McHenry Keyser in 1919 and has two daughters, Ellen McHenry (18) and Louise Este (14). In addition to Masonic affiliations, Jim's extra-curricular activities include tennis, golf, shooting and riding.

BULLOCK, RALPH ADAMS; 7 Idlewood Road, White Plains, N. Y.: Ralph has forsaken New Jersey for New York, but he appears at Princeton often, especially so since his son, John H. Bullock, II (19), is a freshman. Ralph's wife, whom he married in 1918, is the former Madeline Fischer. Ralph secured his LL.B. from Harvard Law School in 1917, and, after doing his part to set back the war-lords of continental Europe as a private in the Air Corps, returned to law and business in New York and now practices the former as a member of the firm of McLaughlin, Russell & Bullock, at No. 527 Fifth Ave., New York. As for the business end of it, Ralph is president and director of the Aldox Corporation; secretary, registrar and director of the Bradford Dyeing Association; secretary, vice-president and director of the Niantic Dyeing Company; vice-president, secretary and director of the Rolls Razor, Inc., secretary and treasurer of the West Gas Improvement Company of America, Inc., and treasurer of the Wycoda Mines Inc. Outside of that he has nothing to do. Ralph does play golf, so he must find time for it somehow. He also belongs to the American Bar Association, the Westchester County Bar Association, the Princeton Club of New York, and the Japan Society.

BUNN, CHARLES; 114 Bascom Place, Madison, Wis.: From Princeton Charley went to Harvard Law School, where he helped them run their Law Review and was rewarded with an LL.B. in 1917. Then he joined the Army and by war's end was a first lieutenant in the 339th Field Artillery. Then back to the ancestral home at Minneapolis and law practice in the same firm with Pierce Butler. But the scholarly flair would not be satisfied with writing an occasional Law Review article, or with acting as a special assistant to the Attorney General of the United States in 1934. So Charley tried out teaching at the University of Chicago Law School in the summer of 1933. Evidently he liked it, because he joined up with the University of Wisconsin and has been at their law school ever since. He is a member of the American Bar Association, and his avocations are gardening and sailing. Charley was married to Harriet Foster in 1921 and his children are Helen (15), George (13) and Peter (7). Lawyerlike, he is careful to inform us that they are not yet attending college.

BUNZEL, E. EVERETT; 215 East 72nd St., New York City: Bunny took his M.D. at Columbia in 1918 and after war service as a first lieutenant in the Medical Corps, began private practice as an obstetrical specialist, in which work he has been outstandingly successful. He is connected with the College of Physicians and Surgeons and the Sloane Maternity Hospital in New York, is a member of the New York Obstetrical Society and a fellow of the American College of Surgeons; he is also the author of many medical papers. In 1922 Bunny married Harriet Harvey and they have two sons, John Harvey (15) and Peter Duryea (12); both are at Kent, preparing for Princeton. When not racing the stork, Bunny likes to race sailing canoes and in 1936 won the championship of the Gypsy Trail Club in that sport.

BURKE, ALAN T.; 2143 So. Owassa St., Tulsa, Okla.: As Froggie was in the Navy in 1917-18, it is not surprising that he is still an avid sailorman, alternating his activities on the bounding blue with golf on the bounding green. And when he is not thus engaged he is helping you keep warm in winter, run your car, and lubricate the lawn mower through his efforts as an independent oil producer. In 1918 Froggie married Augusta G. Stradella; they have three children, Frances (18), who is Wellesley '42; John Francis (16), now at Lawrenceville preparing for Princeton '45, and Augusta (14), who has already decided on Wellesley '46.

BURRILL, DRAYTON; 153 Montclair Ave., Montclair, N. J.: After his marriage to Elizabeth Mordaunt in 1918, Pep settled in New Jersey, whence he is a business commuter to New York's marts of trade. The Burrills have two children, Jerry (17) and Helena (14).

BUTLER, PIERCE, JR.; 600 Edgemere Road, St. Paul, Minn.: As soon as he left Old Nassau, Pierce started to follow in the footsteps of his illustrious father, and obtained his LL.B. from Harvard in 1917. During the same year he married Hilda Vallandigham and got himself a first lieutenancy in the 33rd Infantry. This was one of the Regular outfits that was supposed to go to France but ended up guarding the Panama Canal. Pierce's disgust at this was somewhat alleviated by a sniping campaign intermittently waged with the "spicks" to the southward. On his return home, Pierce entered the practice of law in St. Paul and was appointed Assistant County Attorney in 1925; in 1929 he became a Special Assistant to the U. S. Attorney General. He is now a partner in the firm of Doherty, Rumble, Butler, Sullivan and Mitchell. Pierce is a member of the American, State and County Bar Associations, Knights of Columbus, National Economic League and Foreign Policy Association; he is also a director of Butler Brothers and the Wheeling and Lake Erie Railway, and a partner in the Brothers Company. Pierce has four children: Pierce, III (20), who graduates from Harvard this year; Maev (18), who is at Sarah Lawrence; Deirdre (13), and Michael (10). He states that he has no special hobby, but we have it on equally reputable authority that he achieved something of a reputation as a Big Appleist last year.

CAMPBELL, DONALD WHITAKER; 17 Beechmont St., Worcester, Mass.: Don chose the big guns in the big scrap, and as a first lieutenant in the Coast Artillery served as aide to Brigadier General Sunderland, commanding the 35th Heavy Artillery Brigade. On his return he married Jeannette Ives Hoskins in 1920; they have one daughter, Jean (7½). Don is now treasurer of the State Mutual Life Insurance Co., in Worcester and is also secretary of the local branch of the Foreign Policy Association. His favorite extra-office activity is fishing.

CANDA, HENRY GREENMAN; 66 Glenwood Drive, Greenwich, Conn.: Greenman was married in 1921 to Norma Lee Wise, and Henry Greenman, Jr. (16), is headed for Princeton 1944. For outside activities Greenman père once was captain in the 469th Aero Squadron, and now is in the advertising business with Batten, Barton, Durstine & Osborn, Inc., of New York. He states that he is an "account representative" with them, and cryptically lists under hobbies "tennis book collecting." Figure out for yourself whether the gentleman both plays tennis and collects books, or collects tennis and plays with books, or whether he limits his interest to the collecting of books on tennis. He has long been a valued member of the Class executive committee and is perpetual chairman of our entertainment committee for Reunions.

CARPENTER, DEANE H.; Everett, Wash.

CARSON, SAMUEL PIRIE; 455 Washington Ave., Glen-coe, Ill.: Pirie married Camille Rolland in 1917, served as a seaman in the Navy's share of the war, and after the Armistice returned to the great Chicago department store of Carson, Pirie, Scott & Co. He is now operating manager of the organization. The Carson children are Samuel Pirie Jr. (19), who is an Amherst sophomore; F. Rolland (18), a Princeton sophomore, and Margaret (13).

CARTER, OGDEN B.; Hutton Park, West Orange, N. J.: O. B. has not traveled very far, geographically, since graduation days; from East Orange to West Orange is "all the farther" he has gone. But in other ways approved of man he has migrated distances of great moment. To begin with, like a favored few of the sons of '14, his own son follows his father's footsteps, and is a member of the Freshman Class of 1942 at old Nassau; he is Ogden B. Carter Jr. (18). His mother is the former Esther-Ruth Wing; she and Ogden B., Sr., were married in 1919. O. B. is a real estate broker, connected with Brooks, Harvey & Company, of 331 Madison Avenue, New York City. His favorite recreation is tennis; the which, by the way (if you consult that excellent volume of "The Nassau Herald," published in and by 1914), is chronicled as the chief sporting choice of our entire class brethren. An ensign on the U.S.S. Amphitrite was also the subject of this brief sketch.

CAUGHEY, JOHN E.; Wurtemberg Road, Ellwood City, Pa.: Nick went to the Pittsburgh Seminary from Princeton, where he was awarded his B.D. in 1918 and his Th.M. in 1925. He is now pastor of the United Presbyterian Church, Elwood City. In 1918 he married Jane McDowell and their daughter, Elizabeth Jane (19), will graduate from Westminster College next year; they also have a son, John M. (15), and another daughter, Joan (6). When not occupied with his flock, Nick seeks relaxation in cabinet-making.

CECIL, RUSSEL H.; 27 N E 2nd Avenue, Miami, Florida: Russ is one of the lads of the Class who is lucky enough to be able to handle the twin enjoyment of his business pursuit and his hobby-chasing all within a stone's throw of each other—and interesting ones, all of them. He's still single, as a former member of the fancy-free 6th Marines would prefer. He likes to fish and swim, as does many an American Legionnaire. He does a selling job for the Pan-American Hotel and the Miami Jockey Club. As the Spanish say: "Que hombre!"

CHURCH, RICHARD N. L.; Great Neck, N. Y.: Our old friend Dick should perhaps better be known now as Squire Church for he lists no occupation, having retired from business cares of the Horatian pleasures of his own Sabine farm. He was married in 1914 to Dorothy E. Bennett, and Cynthia is now 23, young Richard (Princeton '43) is 18, and Patricia is 16. Although he served as an ensign during the war and resides as close as possible to Long Island Sound, Dick's hobbies are the purely terrestrial ones of golf and tennis.

CHURCH, C. WARREN; 8 Ivy St., Boston, Mass.

CHURCHWARD, JACK; 24 Cleveland Road, New Haven, Conn.: Despite his proximity to the Sons of Eli, Jack has prospered in the City of Elms and is now an important executive in the engineering field. For example, he is president of the Churchward Engineering Co., 483 Orchard Street, and owner of Churchward & Co., 33 Sperry Street; when he is not building steel cruisers, he is playing golf and winning occasional trophies thereby. Jack married Martha Squires in 1916 and they have two daughters, Josephine Elizabeth (18) who will be Wellesley '43, and Mary Joan (7).

CLANCY, WILLIAM PERCY; Cherokee Park, Louisville, Ky.: With a Kentuckian's true love of horses, Bill naturally gravitated to the Field Artillery when it came time to go to war, serving as a captain in the 12th Regiment of that equine service. In 1922 he married Martine Wathen and is now with the Jenne-Hardy Co., a leading printing and lithographic firm of Louisville. Although he is also interested in golf and dogs, Bill's chief avocation is still the horse; he has won many horse show trophies with his jumpers, and once achieved the signal honor of winning the Gentleman's Cup Race at Churchill Downs. There are two children in the Clancy family, Ann (15) and William P. III (13).

CLAPP, DAVID BLY; 164 Lincoln Road, Westfield, N. J.: Dave is an investment salesman, with Post & Flagg (having New York affiliations), of 790 Broad Street, Newark, N. J. For some time after graduation he worked for the Pennsylvania Railroad, in fact took charge of their station in New York City, but when this palled, and after serving as second lieutenant in the Field Artillery in 1917-18, Dave went into stocks and bonds. He is the husband of Emily W. Sproul, the event occurring in 1919, and the justly proud father of two children, David B., Jr. (18), an honor student at Mercersburg, who will enter Princeton next fall, and Mary Jane (16), who attends the Westfield High School. Dave belongs to the American Philatelic Society, the Bond Club of New Jersey, the Lycoming Historical Society, and the Westfield Glee Club. Philately, the love of which Dave holds in common with Dave Wesson, the late King George V, and the present President of the United States of America, occupies his spare time indoors. Without, he is fond of golf and tennis.

CLIFFORD, GEORGE J.; 94 Cumberland Ave., Verona, N. J.

COLLINS, GRELLET N.; 6 Overhill Road, Scarsdale, N. Y.: Grellet is the director of manufacturing of the Standard Coated Products Corp., of Buchanan, N. Y.; his main business organization is the Technical Association of the Pulp and Paper Industry. He and Martha Jane Hord were married in 1919, and their children are Martha (18), Grellet III (16), due to enter Princeton with the class of 1945, and William Hord (11), who plans to follow three years later. Having once been an ensign in the Navy, Grellet has the watery avocations of swimming, fishing, and sailing. When he comes ashore he goes in for golf and stamp collecting. He sadly admits that he has not won either prizes or national recognition in any of them.

COLT, JOHN; The State House, Trenton, N. J.: After the war, in which John served with the Field Artillery, our only four-time Class secretary joined the Princeton faculty and achieved the distinction of being voted "most popular preceptor" by several senior classes. He had attained the rank of associate professor when he resigned to become president of the Princeton Bank. Governor Moore of New Jersey then drafted John to supervise the relief finances of the state, from which duties he went to the presidency of the Second National Bank of Red Bank, N. J. Announcement has just been made of his appointment as head of the New Jersey Parole Board, with headquarters in Trenton; think how useful he would have been to us if he had held that position twenty-five or more years ago! John married Jack Boyd's sister, Eleanore; their children are Eleanore (now Mrs. C. Allen Hudson, Jr.), John Boyd, and Jane.

CONNETT, WILLIAM B.; Blue Mill Road, New Vernon, N. J. (Post Office—Morristown, N. J.): Bill was an ensign on the U.S.S. Indiana helping the English rule the waves while Germany waived the rules, and then joined his father and brother in the Orange, N. J., hat manufacturing firm of E. V. Connett & Co., founded by his grandfather. Later, Bill entered the insurance business and is now vice-president of Stewart, Hencken & Will, Inc., Maiden Lane, New York City. His favorite sport is sailing and although he went back to Princeton for an M.A. in 1917 he seems to have given up entirely his literary work. This is too bad, as only Bill could do complete justice to the saga of Torpedoman 3rd Class Spoon, U.S.N., which is still to be written. (Ask him about it some day.) In 1917 Bill married Helen Enger; their children are William B. Jr. (20), who is a sophomore at Princeton, and George E. (18), who is a freshman on the same hallowed campus.

COOK, JOHN ORTH; 544 Rossmore Ave., Pittsburgh, Pa.: Once a C.E., always a C.E., so John naturally is still playing with transits and slide rules. His professional duties are concerned with the Carnegie-Illinois Steel Corporation and he is a registered professional engineer of Pennsylvania. He is also a member of the American Society of Civil Engineers and the Engineers' Society of Western Pennsylvania, and is a 32nd Degree Mason. John married Gertrude Bowen in 1919 and they have one daughter, Mary Caroline (10).

COOK, LUCIUS; 50 Central Park West, New York, N. Y.: Lukus went straight from the E.D.A. to the professional stage and has continued thereon as director and actor, with considerable success. He is married and has one daughter.

COOK, STURGES D.; Rock Ledge Farm, Port Clinton, O.

COOPER, ANDREW A.; 204 E. Ninth St., Rome, Ga.: Andy's important activities since 1914 have been, in order, marriage to Anita Stetson in 1917, service as a lieutenant in the Navy Flying Corps in the war, and founding his own insurance business in his home town; he is president of the Georgia Association of Insurance Agents, and a member of the National Association of the same, the Rotary Club and the American Legion. Outside of business Andy keeps young with tennis, riding, sailing and quail shooting. Andy's children are all girls, Nancy Van Dusen (19), who is a junior at Shorter, Alice Allgood (17), who will be Vassar '44, and Anita Stetson II (13), who won't be bothered with college plans at this point.

CORRELL, EUGENE S.; 6201 Orange St., Los Angeles, Calif.: Gene should be one of the busiest men in the Class. Not having seen hair or hide of him in many moons, we have to go solely by the record in doing this estimating. His residential area and his occupation combine to lend themselves to flights of fancy, for he resides in what last fall was called "Cuckooland" (as well as the "Future Athens of America") and his job is to manage the Beverly Hills Branch Office on Termite Control. Mrs. Gene was Eleanore Harris before their marriage in 1923.

COULTER, ELIOT B.; 2327 Twentieth St., N. W., Washington, D. C.: After Eliot finished in 1914 he took his A.M. at Harvard in 1916, then, after an academic interruption an LL.B. at George Washington in 1931. Before and since the latter date he has been in the United States Consular Service. He does not tell us the places where he has been stationed, but in any event his old Chicago home seems to be abandoned for good. Just now he is the Assistant Chief of the Visa Division of the Department of State, and of course is stationed in Washington, D. C. His hobbies are about as unusual as his job: fencing, riding, and collecting old maps. Eliot's marriage terminated in divorce.

CROSS, EBEN J. D.; Stevenson Post Office, Md.: When Eben gave up his war-time captaincy in the Field Artillery he assumed the rank of barrister, and is now a partner in the legal firm of Smith and Cross, Baltimore; from 1924 to 1928 he was Baltimore's deputy city solicitor. He married Elizabeth B. Field in 1924 and has three children, Eben J. D., Jr. (7), Elizabeth Mason (5) and Ann B. (1). His chief hobby is raising dogs and we assume, from recollections of Eben's natatorial past, that they must be water spaniels.

CULL, SEVERN T. W.; Little Rock, Ark.: No word has been had from him since he said farewell to us in June, 1914.

CURTIS, RALPH R.; Grumman Hill Road, Wilton, Conn.: After a war-time career in the Army where he was awarded the Italian War Cross, Ralph went to Cornell for graduate work in chemistry. However, he did not continue in it and is now in the real estate department of the New York Central Railroad, with offices in New York City. When off duty, Ralph specializes in sailing and photography. In 1926 he and Dorothy Brennan were married and now have two daughters, Patricia (9) and Nancy (6).

DALY, WILLIAM O.; 624 N. W. 20th Ave., Portland, Ore.: Horace Greeley's advice seems to have worked out well for Bill, for the young man certainly went as far west as possible and is now a vice-president of Portland's Title and Trust Co. He is also an active member of the American Title Association, Mortgage Bankers Association, Portland Chamber of Commerce and Portland Realty Board. Bill has never married so is always free for extra-curricular activities at the University Club, Waverly Country Club and Multnomah Athletic Club; during the winter he takes money from his fellow members at badminton, switching to golf at other times.

DARLINGTON, FRANK G.; Sewickley, Pa.: Frank served in the R.O.T.C. at Fort Niagara during the war and, having married Jessica Raymond in 1922, settled down near Pittsburgh. Their children are Elise Buckingham (14), and headed for Smith, class of 1945, Jessica Raymond (12), who not being allowed to go to Princeton refuses to go anywhere else, and Edward Raymond (8), who is going to Princeton in the class of 1951, and whose job it will be after graduating there to match his father's B.S. degrees in Electrical Engineering at both M.I.T. and Harvard. Frank says his vocation is trustee and the place where the trusteeing takes place is 1306 Peoples Bank Building, Pittsburgh, Pa., but Frank manages time to keep up that sterling game of tennis of college years, and become skilled in photography. During the summer he fulfills the duties of Commodore of the Hyannisport, Mass., Yacht Club.

DAUB, RUDOLPH E.; 324 N. Lang Ave., Pittsburgh, Pa.

DEAN, HAROLD F.; Wabackme Road, New Canaan, Conn.: Bean went with the 5th Field Artillery as a first lieutenant in 1917 and 1918, and then returned to Minneapolis where he entered the real estate business. Feeling that he might as well know how to design and build as well as sell houses, he took his architectural degree from M.I.T. in 1929, and now has his own private practice in New Canaan; he is also a member of the faculty of the New Canaan Country School. He is at present working on a textbook "Chemistry for the Young," to be published in the near future. Besides his other interests, Bean is an ardent photographer, rider, and sailor, having won several trophies in the latter field (or rather, sea) of endeavor. He married Margaret T. Hannum in 1926, and has two boys, Frederick (11) and Robert (8).

de MERCADO, FRANK; 108 Ninth St., Garden City, N. Y.: If Spanish memory serves, Frank is correctly named the merchant-prince, and a worthy descendant of Marco Polo he is. As a partner, he circumnavigates the busy marts of metropolitan trade. You will find him at both of the following addresses: J. A. Manton, 10 Bridge St., New York City, and Separations Engineering Corporation, 110 East 42nd St., same city, but not at the same time. He is also a director of Thorssen & Ritchie, Inc. Like all successful gentlemen of commerce, he has spoons in divers boiling pots of silver and/or gold, as the case may be. A captain of infantry with the British Army, he bears the proud distinction of having been one of the first to fight the good fight in the brave days of yore. In 1921 Frank married Margaret Harison. Their three children are Barbara (16), Peggy Ann (14) and Michael (12). Frank enjoys the ancient Scottish game of golf; and, when the weather is too misty and murky on the local links, he devotes himself to the arduous devoir of bookreviewing.

de SELDING, EDWARD F.; 12 Woodcroft Road, Summit, N. J.: It is fortunate that Ned's favorite sport is boating, for he is in the boat business, and when he is not sailing for his own pleasure, he is renting vessels for his profit, which would seem to be a perfect arrangement. After the war got through with him as an ensign on the U.S.S. Agamemnon, Ned went into ship brokerage and is now with the firm of A. L. Burbank & Co., Ltd., 17 Battery Place, New York City, where he can supply you with anything that floats, from Ivory Soap to the Queen Mary; he is a former director of the Association of Ship Brokers and Agents. Ned was secretary of the Class from 1929 to 1934, and has been extremely active in his local alumni circles, he and Jack Laird apparently forming some sort of political ring that brought them alternately all the offices of the Lackawanna Alumni Association of New Jersey. He has kept his weight down with tennis and in 1923 went so far as to win the Doubles Championship of the Standard Oil Co. of N. J.; he must have had a high octane rating. In 1923 Ned married Alene Rockwell and they have one son, Edward Bertrand (12), Princeton, '49—probably.

DEWAR, JOHN B.; 2147 Beechwood Boulevard, Pittsburgh, Pa.: Although John has retained his youthful figure that permits him still to wear with comfort his sophomore horsing blazer, he has broadened considerably in other directions and is now president of the John Dewar Co. and the American Decorators, Inc., both of Pittsburgh. John's pre-eminence in his chosen field is attested by his election to the presidency of the Painting and Decorating Contractors of America. He married Catherine Clover in 1924; they have no children. During the war John served as ensign on a sub-chaser.

DEWITT, WALLACE L.; 7240 S. E. 34th Ave., Portland, Ore.

DEXTER, ALLAN LATHAM; 35 Brookfield St., Manchester, Conn.: As First Lieutenant Dexter of the 104th Infantry Allie won the D.S.C. and the Croix de Guerre with palm; for the last two years he has been Major Dexter of the Military Intelligence Reserve, and holds membership in the American Legion and the Reserve Officers' Association. More peaceful lines of interest are golf, tennis, and art (kind of art not specified), but he claims no outstanding achievements in any of them. In his daily life he is superintendent of Cheney Bros., manufacturers, of Manchester. He was married in 1920 to Margaret B. Harris. Their children are George Harris (16), Princeton 1946, Mary Chilton (15), Wellesley 1947, and Margaret Ann (8), as yet an educational free lance.

DINSMORE, LAIRD CURTIS; 718 East 17th St., Brooklyn, N. Y.: After the first World War, Laird returned to sales managing the Corona Typewriter Co., and upon the dissolution of that organization, went into banking via the Irving Trust Co. He is now president and treasurer of the manufacturing firm of H. Planten & Son, Inc., 93 Henry Street, Brooklyn. Laird married Gertrude Planten in 1920 and their children are Janet G. (17), who is '42 at the Packer Collegiate Institute, Barbara H. (15), who will be Smith '45, and Thomas L. (13), headed for Princeton '47. Tennis and golf still claim the Dinsmore leisure hours, chiefly at the Knickerbocker Field Club.

DISBROW, FRANCIS N.; Packard Motor Co., 1861 Broadway, New York, N. Y.: Any time you want to "ask the man who owns one" it is perfectly O.K. with Frank, because he helps think up the answers, and has been doing so ever since graduation.

DIXON, HOMER W.; Boonton, N. J.: A notable fact about Homer is that he is one of our few remaining bachelors. Since the war, when he was a quartermaster in the Navy and came out with the Croix de Guerre with palm, Homer has become a merchant and president of Dixon Brothers of Boonton. He is also a director of the Boonton National Bank. As befits so dignified a citizen he claims golf as a pastime.

DIXON, THOMAS, JR.; Raleigh, N. C.: After a hitch in the Navy "for the duration," Tom spent some time attending to the theatrical interests of his father. Lately he has followed the latter's example and devoted himself to authoring on his own account. Although Tom reports that several editors deny his right to call himself a writer, the fact remains that MacFadden recently published his book "Love's Slave"; it sounds like good reading. When not pounding a typewriter, Tom devotes himself to duck shooting and is so good at it that he was once arrested for exceeding the legal bag limit. At all times he is, and always has been, a bachelor but refuses to commit himself on his future status in that respect.

DOUGLAS, BEVERLY; Iroquois Ave., Nashville, Tenn.: As soon as he could get out of the Medical Reserve in the Army, Jedge took his M.D. at Hopkins in 1918. He then garnered an M.S. in Clinical Medicine at Yale in '21, and went to France to take his Doctor of Science of the State from Lyons University in '23. It seems almost redundant to remark here that the Jedge is now a doctor; he specializes in surgery and is associate professor of that art in the Vanderbilt University Medical School at Nashville, where he also holds down the job of assistant dean. While all this was going on Jedge married Josephine Hutton in 1924, and they have two children: Beverly Jr. (12) and Josephine Coleman (9). He is a member of the Société Française de Chirurgie, a Foreign Fellow of Surgery of the National Research Council of France, a Fellow of the American College of Surgeons, vice-president of Nu Sigma Nu and one of the Tennessee State Regents of the International College of Surgeons, in addition to membership in the American Board of Surgery, American Board of Plastic Surgery, Southern Society of Plastic Surgeons, Phi Delta Theta, Sigma Xi and the Lions International. He has authored several medical works, published here and in France, and though it seems impossible that he has any spare time, we understand on reputable authority that the Judge still lifts his voice in song, plays golf and takes pictures as of old.

DOUGLAS, DONALD B.; 980 N. Greenbay Rd., Lake Forest, Ill.: Drop in on Don and his wife, who used to be Martha Clow before 1919, and their two boys and you see a man who looks and acts just as he did in 1914. Or go to the office of the Quaker Oats Company to see Don and the vice president walks out to the reception room so that you won't get lost on the way back to his office. Either place, you are glad you came and that the older of their two boys, Donald B. Jr. (17), will be in Princeton's Class of '42 and that his younger brother, William C., is three years behind in age and on the road to Princeton. The 332nd Field Artillery had Don as one of its first lieutenants. His liking for horses lingers on as does his prowess at the old Gaelic game of gowf. The only new pastime in the picture is his recent one of skiing.

DRUMMOND, DOUGLAS; 121 Rugby Road, Syracuse, N. Y.: More genial with the years grows Doug, hard as that may seem, considering the vantage point from which he started, and is so far advanced that he has now been able to become one of that vanishing tribe—a banker. He is in the Trust Department of the First Trust and Deposit Co. Glutton for punishment that he is, he is also a trustee of the Syracuse Savings Bank. For many a year, as most of us remember, his was one of the guiding hands of the town's leading emporium, Dey Brothers, and one of the mainstays of his father-in-law, particularly after his first wife's death. She was Amoret Dey. They were married in 1915 and their daughter Margaret is now Mrs. John F. Marsellus, and is the mother of our Class grandchild No. 3. In 1930, Adelaide Gay and he were married. Doug is a faithful, enthusiastic supporter of the city's civic affairs, which run all the way from the Chamber of Commerce and the American Legion to a leading trusteeship of the Syracuse General Hospital and a director of Group Hospital Service. But he still likes to break away for a little fishing.

DuBARRY, JOSEPH N.; Mt. Pleasant Road, Villa Nova, Pa.: Joe may have liked "to flop in the waves that slop" in the Triangle shows, but he turned up as a captain of doughboys in the war. Following this, he joined the advertising agency of Barrows and Richardson as a copywriter but eventually switched to financial work. Joe is now resident manager for Philadelphia of the investment firm of Clarke, Sinsabaugh & Co., in the Girard Trust Building. He is also one of the Board of Managers of the Children's Hospital of Philadelphia, and a member of the Racquet Club of Philadelphia and the Princeton Club of New York. In 1915 Joe married Ella Brock, and they had one son Joseph N. IV (22) who is a junior at Princeton. Joe's first wife died, and in 1936 he married Barbara Hawk.

DUBOIS, ROBERT J.; Homestead Ave., Mt. Vernon, N. Y.

DULLES, ALLEN WELSH; 239 East 61st St., New York City: Allie joined the Diplomatic Service after graduation and the attainment of a Princeton M.A. in 1916. During the war he was with the American Legation in Berne, Switzerland, and after the cessation of hostilities went on to be secretary of our embassy in Berlin. He returned to this country in 1926, took his LL.B. at George Washington University, and then served as legal adviser to the U. S. delegations at the Disarmament Conferences in 1927 and 1932-33. He is now a partner in the New York law firm of Sullivan and Cromwell. With Hamilton Fish Armstrong, '16, Allie co-authored the book "Can We Be Neutral?", published by Harper's in 1936, but it is only right to state that he had antedated this literary endeavor with "The Boer War" written in 1901 when he was at the tender age of 8, and privately published; this volume holds the distinction of being the work of the youngest author in the New York Public Library. Since he has been in New York Allie has been politically prominent in many Republican organizations; he is a member of various bar and other legal associations, secretary and director of the Council on Foreign Relations, and a director of the J. Henry Schroder Banking Corporation and the Schroder Trust Co. For relaxation, he is a keen competitor in golf, tennis, bridge and sailing, and has various trophies to prove it. In 1920 Allie married Clover Todd; their children are Clover Todd (16), Joan (15) and Allen Macy (9).

DUNN, FREDERICK SHERWOOD; Penrhyn Road, Woodbridge, Conn.: Ted Dunn, sad to relate, has become a Yale man. This startling metamorphosis, however, can be explained. After graduating at Princeton, he became the recipient of an LL.B. from New York Law School in 1917, likewise of a Ph.D. (earned) at Johns Hopkins in 1928, and an M.A. (honorary), from Yale University in 1935. And now the secret is out; Ted is Professor of International Relations and Fellow of Davenport College, at Yale. He makes his living there, so he's got to stay. In addition to this, he is a member of the Executive Committee, Yale Institute of International Relations; the Advisory Committee, Harvard Research in International Law, and the Executive Committee, Conference of Teachers of International Law and Related Subjects. He is also affiliated with the New York Bar Association, the American Society of International Law, the American Political Science Association, the Council on Foreign Relations, the American Council-Institute of Pacific Relations, the Foreign Policy Association, and Phi Beta Kappa. He has held the following positions: Assistant Solicitor, Department of State, Washington, D. C., 1920-22; Associate Counsel, American and British Claims Arbitration, 1922-24, and Attorney (U. S.), Mixed Claims Commission, United States and Mexico, 1925-26. Ted has also written "The Practice and Procedure of International Conferences" (Johns Hopkins Press, 1929); "The Protection of Nationals" (Johns Hopkins Press, 1932); "The Diplomatic Protection of Americans in Mexico" (Columbia University Press, 1933); "Peaceful Change" (Council on Foreign Relations, 1937); and, in preparation, "The Government and Foreign Relations" (Harcourt, Brace & Co., 1939). Ted was married to Gordon Woodbury in 1922, who has since died. There are two children, Martha (12), and Woodbury (9). Ted served during the war as first lieutenant in the Tank Corps, and this, so far as we know, without having anything to do with the late-lamented National Prohibition Amendment. Both in war and in peace, parenthetically, Ted is interested in architecture.

DURFLINGER, CLARENCE W.; London, O.

DWELLE, VERNON AVERELL; 115 Maple Avenue, Glenbrook, Conn.: Some of our classmates are in exactly the jobs that even the dullest class prophet would have put them down for. But anyone that would have stated, Anno Domini 1914, that Vernon Dwelle was headed for the career of headmaster of a school would certainly have needed to have his head examined. Yet God moves in a mysterious way, His wonders to perform. Mr. Dwelle is headmaster of the King School, at Stamford, Conn. His avocations are those well fitting his career, bridge and golf. In the latter indeed he has attained the distinction of a handicap of 18, and in what academic circles refer to as extra-curricular activities he is on the local council of the Boy Scouts and (by way of proper balance) on the Stamford Committee on Maternal Health. Also on the Glenbrook Library Board and Stamford Republican Committee, which may or may not be intellectually related activities. In military matters the headmaster was a corporal in the Field Artillery. Vern was married in 1922 to Hazel Kimber and their children are Edwin Rice Dwelle (14), headed for Princeton, '46, and Elizabeth (1), who has indicated a preference for Mt. Holyoke, but her class is still in doubt.

DYCKMAN, FRANCIS HAMILTON; Stone House, Roslyn, N. Y.: Ham has just returned to this country after many years of exile in London, representing the Guaranty Trust Co. of New York. He is now manager of the foreign department of the New York investment firm of Smith Barney & Co., 14 Wall Street. During the war Ham was a captain in the Adjutant General's Department but didn't let it interfere with his tennis and golf which he still plays with unabated avidity. In 1923 he married Kathryn Bomann, and they have two children, Marie Celia (14) and Francis Hamilton, Jr. (12).

EDDY, ROBERT CONDIT; 401 High St., Easton, Pa.: After graduation Bob went in for architectural engineering and with time out for the war—in which he was a corporal with the 102nd Engineers—he has continued in that line of endeavor ever since. Bob married Vivian Powell in 1927 and they have one daughter, Margot (7). He is a member of the Princeton Club of Chicago, the Princeton Engineering Society, the American Legion and the Masons, and bows to no one in his predilection for golf as an avocation.

ELLIOTT, HENRY P.; 1225 Park Avenue, New York City: Henry is a barrister. After graduating from Harvard Law School, with the coveted LL.B., in 1917, he served as United States Vice-Consul at Bordeaux and Paris for two years, gracing the position with all the elegance and competency of the days of "Simply Cynthia." The Triangle Club never had a better. He is, moreover, the husband of the former Carola Dommerich, and the father of two offspring, Henry P., Jr. (3), and Carolyn D. (5 months, at present writing). With these, in addition to the pursuit of his profession, Henry once in a while has time for a little golf.

ELSWORTH, OLIVER B.; Belle Haven, Greenwich, Conn.: Oliver married Charlotte Gaston in 1917, the rest of his family now numbering two daughters, Bettie (15) and Phebe Ann (8). He has been in the insurance business for a number of years and is secretary of the insurance firm of Frederick K. Gaston, Inc., at 100 East 42nd Street, New York City.

EMMONS, THORNTON; 241 S. Dawson Ave., Columbus, O.

ENCK, WARREN K.; Orchard Crest Farm, Biglerville, Pa.: "They are rammed and crammed in buses and they're all of them alone" sang our own Alfred Noyes back in the days of our preceptorial youth before we knew how right he'd be. Warren probably heeded the tenor of his song, for out he went to farming in the pleasant hills of Pennsylvania, to take him a wife and to raise up sons and daughters—and fruit. The wife was Myrtle Watkins in the year 1916; the children are three daughters and a son. Martha Jane (21) graduates this June from Westminster Choir College. Mary Grace (20) steps out the same June with her degree from the Pennsylvania School of Horticulture. Joan Kline (7) is the baby of the lot, though she may not like to see it in print. The boy is Thomas (16), and headed in the right and proper collegiate footsteps.

ENNENGA, OSCAR; 717 West Stephenson St., Freeport, Ill.: Oscar was one of our early benedicts, marrying Cornelia Thomas in 1916. He has engaged in merchandising since leaving Princeton and is now president of E & W Clothing House, embracing ten retail stores; Oscar is also active in various civic enterprises, particularly church and country club interests. The Ennengas have two sons, Oscar Jr. (20), who is a junior at Washington and Lee, and Thomas (16), a high school junior.

EWING, H. GORDON; 6200 Mossway, Baltimore, Md.: Ink made a happy landing in Baltimore after the war—he was an Air Corps lieutenant therein—and assumed the rank of president of the Coffee Products Co. Later he transferred to real estate and is now sales manager of the North Shore Land Co., 18 E. Lexington Street. This back-to-the-soil movement has also resulted in his becoming quite a golfer. Ink married Carolyn W. Sanford in 1926; their two children are Rieta Williams (9), and Gordon Robinson (7).

FLANAGAN, ARTHUR J.; 2130 Lincoln Park, W., Chicago, Ill.

FORD, HALSEY; 2321 Brevard Road, St. Petersburg, Fla.: During the war, Halsey was awarded the Navy D.S.C.

FORGAN, DAVID; c/o J. Russell Forgan, 38 Wall St., New York, N. Y.

FRANCE, JOSEPH; 1409 Mercantile Trust Building, Baltimore, Md.: Joe practices his profession of the law, with the firm of Venable, Baetjer & Howard, in Baltimore. An LL.B. from Harvard started him on his career. Prior to that he was a lieutenant (junior grade), on the U.S.S. Roanoke, during the late so-called unpleasantness with the Central Powers. Joe is married; his wife was Catherine Thom. They have two children: Catherine Hunt France (16), and Pembroke (9). His favorite avocation is riding. (We well remember Joe's trip by motor-cycle during the summer of 1913, when he invaded the States north of the Mason and Dixon line, in preparation for senior year, no doubt. If you go to the Smithsonian Institution in Washington you may perhaps see the ancient vehicle de France.)

FRICK, ROBERT DENISON; Owings Mills, Md.: Denny is one of the landed '14 gentry in and around Baltimore, where he is engaged in investment banking with the highly Princeton firm of Robert Garrett & Sons, and golf. He married Catherine Field Usher in 1932 and they have two children, Catherine Denison (5) and Louise Winslow (3). During the war Denny was a second lieutenant with the 115th Field Artillery.

FROELICH, SYLVAN L.; Savoy-Plaza Hotel, New York City: Sylvan has (so far) conferred upon no maiden the honor of his name; he still exists in so-called single blessedness, and acts in the official capacity of president and a director of the department store of Ludwig Baumann & Co., New York. During the war, Sylvan was an ensign on the U.S.S. Leviathan, ferrying some of us across the vasty deep to la belle France and return. He then entered the Baumann establishment as a furniture salesman and has since risen successively through the ranks of buyer, secretary and treasurer, and vice-president. For the right use of his leisure time, he engages in dog raising and book collecting.

GAMBLE, CLARENCE JAMES; 255 Adams St., Milton, Mass.: Clarence started toward his medical degree via an M.A. at Princeton in 1916; he followed this with war service in the Medical Corps, and received his M.D. from Harvard in 1920. He served for several years as assistant professor of pharmacology at the University of Pennsylvania, and is now medical field director of the Birth Control Clinical Research Bureau, New York City. Clarence is a member of the American Public Health Association, Nu Sigma Nu, and the Foreign Policy Association, and is a frequent contributor of articles on medical research to leading medical journals; his extra-office hobbies are tennis, yachting and swimming. In 1924 Clarence was married to Sarah Merry Bradley; their children are Sarah Louise (12), Richard Bradley (10), Walter James (7), Mary Julia (4), and Robert David (1), with the boys headed for Princeton in the classes of 1950, 1952 and 1958.

GARDNER, FRED W.; Pecksland Road, Greenwich, Conn.: For many years, Fred was involved in automobile manufacturing, withdrawing from that to become a partner in the brokerage firm of Reinholdt & Gardner, with main offices in St. Louis. In 1931 he married Margaret Watkins; they have no children. Fred is a Mason, also a golfer; during the war he was a lieutenant on the U. S. destroyer Caldwell.

GATCH, JOHN N.; Milford, Ohio: Snatch's undergrad ambition to be a lawyer found its fulfillment in 1917, when he got his LL.B at Harvard. Then he became a first lieutenant in the Infantry, celebrating his escape therefrom by returning to Cincinnati and establishing himself in the legal circles of the Queen City. He is now one of the Gatches in the law firm of Gatch, McLaughlin and Gatch, 1421 Union Central Building. He is also a member of the Cincinnati Bar Association, Cincinnati Literary Club, and the American Legion, on the faculty of the night law school of the Cincinnati Y.M.C.A., and spreads his hobbying between golf, fishing and amateur farming. In 1919 Snatch married Orpha Gerrans, their children being Orpha Ann (19), who is a sophomore at Smith, John N., Jr. (17), who goes to Princeton next year, Mary (deceased), Dorothy (14), Diana (9), Margaret (7), and Lewis Gerrans (4).

GIBSON, ROBERT HAMMOND; Aveley Farm, Easton, Md.: Bob is as amphibious as the native dogs of his own Chesapeake Bay; when he is not running his farm as president of The Aveley Corporation he is off sailing as a member of the Chesapeake Bay Yacht Racing Association, Star Class Yacht Racing Association, Comet Class Yacht Racing Association, Miles River Yacht Club, Tred River Yacht Club or the Gibson Island Club Yacht Squadron. He is either a director, lecturer, secretary, treasurer or race committee chairman of most of these organizations and has won many prizes in their races; he has cruised as far as the Gulf of Mexico. Bob is also a member of the First Regiment, Maryland National Guard. Between times he plays tennis and makes ship models, but will probably have to break away from all that this spring as he is a Maryland State Commissioner to the New York World's Fair. Bob married Julia Cecilia Hathaway in 1931.

GOLDSMITH, CLARENCE E.; 553 Prospect St., Maplewood, N. J.: Tookie, who was one of our most active members in undergrad days, has retained a constant and enthusiastic interest in Class and Princeton affairs ever since. He was president of the Class from 1929 to 1934 and has always been a member of the executive committee; the acquisition and furnishing of the Class House was in large part due to his untiring efforts. Originally entering advertising work, Tookie later switched to stocks and bonds and is now a partner in the investment firm of White, Weld & Co., 40 Wall Street, New York City. His favorite pastimes are golf and music (he swings a mean tenor) and as he has never married, Tookie can indulge in these avocations unhindered. During the war, he served as a captain with the 318th Infantry.

GOLTRA, EDWARD FIELD, JR., 4487 Lindell Blvd., St. Louis, Mo.: Ed is still doing business at the same old address in the celebrated city named for the ancient Louis of France. This more modern gentleman, our Classmate, is a metallurgical engineer and manager of the Mississippi Valley Iron Company, with offices at 6500 So. Broadway, St. Louis. He is likewise a director of the self-same corporation and also of the Missouri Iron Company. We are glad to note that he is thus impartial, and does not prefer one State above another, so long of course as both produce the right kind of ore or whatever it be that iron companies feed upon, or, to shorten the symbolism, so long as both produce. Field was married to Elizabeth Hoff, in the year 1937—the which is almost a record, so far as can be recalled, for lately turned benedicts. He seems, in addition thereto, to have broken another record; he served in 1917 in the Overseas Engineering Department, while all the time remaining bodily at the League Island Navy Yard in Philadelphia.

GOODWIN, DANIEL R.; 510 Walnut Lane, Swarthmore, Pa.: Following his youthful bent for biology, Dan decided after being a captain in the Construction Division, U. S. A., on a life work of trying to make two dollars grow where only one grew before, via the investment banking method; he is now manager of the banking firm of H. M. Byllesby & Co., Inc., Stock Exchange Building, Philadelphia. He is also president of the board of trustees of the Western Home for Children, on the advisory board of the Woman's Hospital, and a member of the Pennsylvania Committee of Penal Affairs, Swarthmore Town Committee, Philadelphia Committee on Public Affairs and the Bureau of Municipal Research, the Union League Club and is a Mason at large. Yet he still finds time to indulge in his hobby of wood working and to raise a family. Dan married Helen E. Walls in 1916 and they have two daughters and one son; Carol Crawford (18) is a freshman at Bucknell, Walter Walls (16) is headed for either Princeton or Dartmouth (as if there could be any choice!) and Nancy McIlvaine (14) wants to go to Cornell.

GRAHAM, THORNTON G.; 412 West Main St., Kent, O.: Tim is now vice-president of the B. F. Goodrich Co., Akron, O., and has the distinction of having been called an economic royalist by the New York Herald Tribune. Nevertheless he still finds time to keep up his interest in Princeton and was the '37 president of the Alumni Association of Northern Ohio. (He succeeded Fred Robertson in that high office, who succeeded Rip Shenk, so '14 is doing all right out that way). He is also a member of several Masonic orders. Tim married Jessie M. Currie in 1916; their son Robert Currie (20) is a junior at Brown, their daughter Janet Kerr (18) is a sophomore at the Connecticut College for Women, and their youngest boy Charles T. (14) is still in prep.

GRANBERY, JAMES T.; R.F.D. No. 1, Brentwood, Tenn.: Jim was a Field Artillery captain during the war and afterwards engaged for a few years in civil engineering work in Cincinnati. The call of the blue grass was too strong for him however, so he moved himself and his family back into Tennessee where he is absorbed in gentlemanly farming and quail shooting. He is a member of the Belle Meade Country Club and a director of Les Cheneaux Club, the latter in Michigan. He is also extremely active in Princeton affairs, being president of the Middle Tennessee Princeton Alumni Association and a member of the Graduate Council; to make sure that the local school boys are properly Princeton-conscious Jim is one of the trustees of the Montgomery Bell Academy in Nashville. In 1918 Jim married Llewellyna Rebhun and their children are Llewellyna (20), a Smith sophomore, William Langley III (18), who will be Princeton '43, and James T. Jr. (13), who will be ditto '47.

GREEN, ABRAM A.; 702 S. W. Life Bldg., Dallas, Tex.

GREGORY, RALPH; 1122 East First St., Bloomington, Ind.: As soon as the armistice demobilized Second Lieutenant

Gregory from the Field Artillery, he returned to the old home grounds and in 1924 married Margaret Cole. They now have two children, Fred Hodge (13), who is prepping for Princeton, and Marian (11), destined for Indiana University. In business Ralph is branch manager of the Indianapolis office of the Equitable Securities Corporation; outside of business he is a golf enthusiast and a member of the American Legion, Rainbow Division Veterans' Association, Veterans of Foreign Wars, and Rotary.

GRESH, WILLIAM K.; Pottstown, Pa.: Bill married Margaret Mercedes Mulkey and they have two boys, William K. Jr. (21), and Philip Mulkey (20).

HADDOCK, WILLIAM C., JR.; Cloverly Cottage, Cloverly Lane, Rydal, Pa.

HALLIGAN, H. M. J.; 360 Payson Road, Belmont, Mass.

HARDENBURGH, WILLIAM P., JR.; Bernardsville, N. J.

HARDING, CHARLES C.; 1100 29th St., Ashland, Ky.: Charlie is one of our veteran married men, having been in that state since 1917—his wife's name was Cora Branning—only a year after he took his M.F. degree at Yale. (For the benefit of the uninitiated that means that Charlie is a Master of Forestry.) There are three little Harding oaks—James (20), who is at the University of Cincinnati, class of 1942, Richard (17), and Cora Kathryn (14). Charlie has left his earlier work in forestry and is now the purchasing agent of Ben Williamson & Co., wholesale hardware dealers in his home city. He is a member of the American Legion, and as his favorite pastimes lists hiking, gardening, and stamp collecting. The “hiking” at least sounds like the Charlie of old.

HARPER, LAWRENCE KENT; Timonium Road, Luther-ville, R.F.D., Md.: Larry acquired two distinctions during the World War; he was a first lieutenant with one of the two Anti-Aircraft Machine Gun battalions in our army, and he survived the job. Back in Baltimore, he became an investment banker to such effect that he is now president of the Colonial Bond and Share Corporation, with offices in the First National Bank Building. He is a member of the Foreign Policy Association and spends a lot of his spare time in architectural renovating work and tennis. In 1918 Larry married Katherine Hardy and they have two children, Lawrence Kent, Jr. (19), who will be '44 at Virginia, and Jessie Kent (16), destined for Bryn Mawr '46.

HARRIS, GEORGE ELLSWORTH; 8 South Brookwood Drive, Montclair, N. J.: His father's advertising agency claimed our Junior year secretary after graduation, and he is now president of the Gotham Advertising Co., 250 Park Ave., New York City. El married Abby Allen Mayo in 1917, and they have two sons, George E. III (20), and Emerson Mayo (18), the latter entering Princeton in the class of 1944. Being an advertising agent, one of El's pastimes naturally is golf but he can—and does—sail, swim and collect books; he is also secretary of the Jersey Thrift Plan, Inc. However, El considers that his only just claim to fame is being the father of the Andover fullback who made a 75 yard run for the winning touchdown in the Andover-Exeter football game last fall. It seems that Exeter had the ball on Andover's 15-yard line with a minute to go and the score 6-2 in their favor. In the stands, Mrs. Harris nervously inquired of her husband, "Isn't there any way Andover can win this game?" To which El, equally nervous, replied, "Only if Exeter tries a field goal that is blocked, and an Andover man recovers the ball and runs for a touchdown." And at that precise moment Exeter did try a field goal, it was blocked, and young Emerson Harris recovered the ball and ran for a touchdown. Hell-devil Skillman please note.

HARRIS, THURMOND; Sheffield, Ala.: Thurmond is the reputed real estate king of Sheffield. His reign is undisputed, for he has never married a queen to share his throne with him. And we always thought Alabama was full of queens!

HARTMAN, JOHN IVES; 924 Marietta Avenue, Lancaster, Pa.: A Classmate who still remains in his native state and city, Jack continues to enliven the Garden Spot of Penn's Woods by his faith and works. He, together with his wife, the former Loneita E. Straub, who gave up her single estate in 1916, are the parents of four children, Helen Straub (20), who graduated from Bryn Mawr in 1938, and won second prize in Vogue's 1938 "Prix de Paris" and is now employed by said magazine; John Ives, Jr. (18), Princeton 1941; Phyllis Weidler (17), who is in Bennington College in the class of 1942; and Robert B. II (14), who will attend Princeton in the class of 1946. From the foregoing hasty glance at the family tree, it will be readily understood why Jack has to be president and treasurer of the manufacturing firm of Follmer, Clogg & Co., Inc., in Lancaster. They make umbrellas, and, although this is no advertisement, it is reliably reported that Prime Minister Chamberlain never is seen without one. Jack used to play tennis on the team of the Lancaster Country Club. He, likewise, is an Episcopal layman of weight and standing. His friend, Dean Thomas J. Heistand, of the Diocese of Harrisburg, served in the war with Hobey Baker, Jack reports, and named his oldest son Hobart Baker Heistand.

HARTSHORNE, HAROLD; Little Silver, N. J.: If undergraduate activities mean anything Harold should by now be a leading actor of dramatic roles, or the publisher of a pictorial magazine. As a matter of fact he is neither, but a member of the New York Stock Exchange and partner in the brokerage firm of S. B. Chapin & Co. Although one of his hobbies still is the taking of fine photographs, he reserves most of his avocational enthusiasm for figure skating in which he won the National Dance Championship in 1937 and 1938; when there is no ice he keeps in trim with tennis. Harold married Marietta L. Chapin in 1916; she died two years later, and in 1923 he married Mary S. S. Bryan. His children are Harold Jr. (20), who is a junior at Princeton, James Mott (15), who will be Princeton '46, Anne MacW. (12), and Margaret B. (10). During the war Harold was a second lieutenant in the Department of Criminal Investigation.

HAWKINS, DAVID R.; New Canaan, Conn.: Dave came right back to Princeton after graduation to get his M.A. in 1915; after which, as a major in the 325th Infantry he taught the young idea how to shoot quite literally. He returned home to get an LL.B from Harvard in 1921 and is now a partner in the law firm of Sullivan and Cromwell, New York City. Dave is a member of the local, state and national bar associations, and gets directors' fees from the North American Co. and the Van Raalte Co., Inc. In 1929 Dave married Mary Margaret Landon and they have three children: Anne (8), John (5) and Elizabeth (2); despite their tender years the young Hawkinses are already prattling of Smith, Princeton and Smith, respectively. (If you really want to feel old, we can tell you that Hawkins père has worked it out that their classes will be 1952, 1955 and 1958.)

HEATH, PAUL SILAS; 79 Bellevue Drive, Rochester, N. Y.: After Paul had served his time as a second lieutenant in the Coast Artillery he began his studies for the ministry in Auburn Theological Seminary, Auburn, N. Y., and went on to get a D.D. at Lafayette in 1928. Apparently the Auburn theologians knew a good man when they saw one, for they recently asked Paul to come back to them as president of the institution and there he is now. Paul married Elizabeth Hubbell in 1915 and they are the parents of four children: Elizabeth (22) who graduated from Wheaton in '38, William (18), Mary (15) and Robert (11). When President Heath is not fishing for sinners, he is an avid fly-caster for the wily trout.

HENDEL, JAMES M.; 570 Park Ave., New York City: Jim has always continued his interest in the chemicals, flasks, retorts and Bunsen burners that were his favorite playthings in college. During the war he was one of the chemists in the Bureau of Aircraft Production, took his Ph.D. at Columbia in 1922, and is now associate professor of chemistry at Hunter College, New York. He is a member of the American Chemical Society and the American Association for the Advancement of Science, and is the author of "Quantitative Analysis," published by Ginn &

Co. in 1925. Jim's hobbies are photography, in which he has won several awards, and tennis and swimming in which he has won none. In 1926 Jim married Pastoriza Flores; since her death, Jim's immediate family has consisted of a son, Philip James Flores (9), and a daughter, Pastoriza Flores (5).

HEYL, JOHN BERNARD; 120 Bleddyn Road, Ardmore, Pa.: John still lives on the Main Line; he dwelt in Wynnewood while in College, now it's Ardmore. The former Mary L. Scull became John's wife in 1922. Since then they have added two children to their family, Mary Katharine (10), and William C. Scull (14), the latter Princeton-to-be, 1946. Heyl Brothers Company, of 41 Washington Avenue, Philadelphia, Pa., manufacturers of syrups, sugars and such, claims John as Secretary-Treasurer during his business hours. He is also Secretary of the Board of Trustees of the Northern Home for Friendless Children, and a member of the Merion Cricket Club and of the Princeton Club of Philadelphia. For spare time and homework, he plays tennis and badminton and engages in book-collecting. He is still a member of the First Troop Philadelphia City Cavalry, but is no longer active therein. During the War which celebrated the graduation of our Class, John played the part of a private in the 103rd Trench Mortar Battalion. He has traveled extensively in Europe. The summer after graduation he and Pax Blair journeyed there together, until August and the German war-lords conspired to hamper the tourist trade. Eight years later John had his honeymoon "over there" and the four current Heyls only a few years ago spent a delightful vacation season on the coasts of Brittany and brushed up on their French.

HESSENBRUCH, HERMAN M.; Wynnewood, Pa.: Hess was married in 1915 to Florence M. Dreer and has the following young and grown-up Hessenbruchs: Ann (22), now Mrs. Madara, Ida M. (20), H. Markle, Jr. (16) (but he will probably be called Hess just the same for he's going to Princeton soon) and F. Mary (6). Having fought the war as a second lieutenant of Field Artillery, he now occupies himself in the dual personality of growing seeds and making lawn mowers to cut down whatever the seeds grow up to be. This situation is partly simplified by Hess being president and a director of both the Philadelphia Lawn Mower & Manufacturing Co. and Henry A. Dreer & Co. (both in Philadelphia). To be versatile he is also a director of Jeddo-Highland Coal Co. and Markle Corporation. However, all these pastimes partly detract from his real interest in sailing, hunting and tennis (no mention of water polo).

HIGGINS, CHARTERS K.; 39 East 39th St., New York City: Hig majored in Infantry hither and yon during the war, since which time he has remained in the States including the state of single blessedness. He is sales manager of the Wellington Foundation, Inc., 347 Madison Ave., New York City, specializing in investment trusts. Other Higgins specialties are backgammon (never bet doubles with him!), swimming, sailing and riding.

HILLHOUSE, JULIAN G.; Newton, Conn.

HILLYER, LEWIS A.; 346 W. Huron St., Pontiac, Mich.

HOGAN, ROMAINE; 1306 Carmona Ave., Los Angeles, Cal.: Romaine obtained his LL.B. from Columbia in '17, and carries on his legal work in Los Angeles.

HOGG, THEODORE BOSIER; Chatham, Mass.: Following a year's work as a special assistant in the Department of State, Ted went to Germany as United States Consul in Berlin from 1920 to 1922; from 1922 to date he has been thanking his lucky stars he isn't there now. Where he is now is at the heel of Cape Cod, engaged in his own real estate and investment brokerage business. (During the long winter months, he probably does a little wrecking on the side with the other inhabitants of that nautically dangerous coast.) In 1917 Ted married Mildred Brown; their children are Theodore B., Jr. (14), Catherine Morton (13) and Caroline Ewing (7). The boy is determined to be Princeton '45, and the girls are looking forward to Vassar.

HOLBERT, REMSEN WISNER; 59 Livingston St., Brooklyn, N. Y.: Rem is one of those gifted individuals who can always balance his check book with the bank's statement; he has specialized in accounting work and holds a warrant as a Certified Public Accountant. In 1924 he married Wilhelmina F. Dunning and has one daughter, Clara (14). Rem has figured out that Clara will enter Middlebury College with the class of 1947, but with a mathematician's true caution makes the proviso that this depends somewhat upon the favorable reaction of the Middlebury dean. Rem's professional endeavors are for the benefit of the comptroller's office of the American Water Works and Electric Co., Inc., 50 Broad St., New York; his recreations are divided between his farm in Warwick, N. Y., and his hobby of collecting fossils of the Devonian era.

HONIGMAN, JOSEPH K.; 91 Bergen Place, Red Bank, N. J.

HOWARD, E. HARRIS, JR.; 160 Waterman St., Providence, R. I.: Mickey married Beatrice Rockford in 1919 and they have two children, E. Harris III (18), who enters Princeton in the fall, and Virginia (15). He continues his devotion to the insurance business which he entered after leaving Princeton and is now secretary of the Providence firm of E. L. Watson Co., Inc.; he is also a member of the Providence Chamber of Commerce and the Turks Head Club. Mickey likewise holds the unusual distinction for a Princetonian of brotherhood in Psi Upsilon, a hold-over from his pre-transfer college days. As avocations, Mickey favors hunting and golf, in both of which fields of endeavor he shoots with equal success.

HOWELL, GEORGE S.; 206 W. California St., Pasadena, Cal.: Though not strictly a native Native Son, George has apparently adopted California and set himself up therein as a manufacturer. First, however, he became a Cavalary shave tail and the husband of Elizabeth Burke, both in 1917. Their daughter Barbara (16) enters Mills College in the class of '43.

HUBBELL, NELSON E.; 96 Starin Ave., Buffalo, N. Y.: During the war Nels was in the Navy Air Corps and so learned to appreciate the real worth of solid earth. Consequently he went into the real estate business, where he is now except during the fall when he would rather be watching football games. Nels married Harriet McNaughton in 1921 and has one son, Nelson, Jr. (16), whose name will appear in the Princeton catalog as a member of '44 or '45.

HUDSON, WILLIAM J.; Chattolane, Owings Mills, Md.: Bill is one of the few warriors extant who can combine both the Navy and Plattsburg in his war-time service; he was an ensign on the U.S.S. Plattsburg. Following this he turned to banking, and is now head of his own investment banking business with offices in the First National Bank Building, Baltimore. Bill married Louise Jones in 1920, and they have three income tax exemptions: William J., Jr. (16), Paul C. (14) and Carroll (4).

HUGHES, JOHN C.; 63 East 74th St., New York City: Following graduation, John started in to be a cotton merchant, but the war changed him into a second lieutenant of Cavalry in 1917. Shipped overseas, he found himself at Chaumont where he was told that he had been drafted as aide to a general. The general turned out to be Pershing and Johnnie continued on the commander's personal staff until after the armistice, finally emerging as a major of Infantry. He also brought home with him the Distinguished Service Medal (U. S.), the French Legion of Honor, the Order of Leopold (Belgium), and the Crown of Italy. It is generally believed that the amount of "inside-stuff" on the war which John could tell if he would is only equalled by the amount of "inside-stuff" on the war which John could tell but won't. After demobilization John returned to his cotton brokering and is now treasurer of McCampbell & Co., 40 Worth St., New York City. He married Margaret Porter in 1923 and has one son, John Lawrence (13). His extra-curricular activities include membership in the Merchants Association and the Council on Foreign Relations.

HUGHSON, WALTER; Kenilworth Apartments, Germantown, Pa.: From Princeton, Walt went to Johns Hopkins and there took his M.D. in 1918. Since then he has specialized in otological research and is now director of the otological research laboratory of the Abington Memorial Hospital, Abington, Pa.; he is also an associate in otology in the Medical and Graduate Medical Schools of the University of Pennsylvania. ("Otology" is that branch of medicine which treats of the ear and its diseases. You're welcome.) Walt married Mildred Curtis in 1917 and has four children: Letitia Augusta (19), who is 1940 at Vassar, Marjorie (17), Walter, Jr. (15), and William John Curtis (12). He is a member of the Philadelphia Academy of Medicine, Maryland and Pennsylvania state and county medical societies, the American Medical Association, American Otological Association, American Triological Association of Anatomists, Halsted Club, and Johns Hopkins Surgical Society. He is also the author of fifty scientific papers on a variety of medical subjects, largely based on his experimental work. At other times, Walt likes to go sailing, and to collect etchings and antiques.

HUMPHREYS, LANDON; Humphreys Medicine Co., 57 Prince St., New York, N. Y.

HUNTER, GALE; 37-21 147th St., Flushing, N. Y.: Gale's constant, generous and untiring efforts in behalf of our Class welfare in general and our Reunions in particular are too familiar and appreciated to need further comment here; what may not be so well known, because it doesn't sound possible, is that he finds time to do a lot of other things equally well. In business, Gale is president of the Hunter Sash Co., Inc., and director and treasurer of the Hunter Car Sign Co., the 11 Franklin Place Corp., and 174 Linden Ave., Inc., all of Flushing. Outside of business he is a trustee and chairman of the house committee of the Flushing Hospital, and a trustee of the Point O' Woods Association, N. Y.; he is also a hunter (no pun), a photographer, a golfer and a proud father. In 1921 he married Margaret W. Meigs, and their children are Austin Fenley (16) who will go to Princeton in the class of '44, Elizabeth (14), and Joan Popham (12). During the war, Gale was an aspirant with the French Field Artillery, which is not a headache tablet but a species of under-officer.

HUNTER, JOSEPH F.; 105 Grandview Ave., Rye, New York: Joe is one of those uncommunicative souls who leave us blank as to what sort of butterfly has emerged from the caterpillar of 1914—a poetic flight suggested by Joe's then tall and thin frame, which he may or may not now retain. So all we can record is that in 1920 he married Blanche Dumont, and that Patricia is sixteen years old, and Margaret Stuart fifteen. Joe is a lawyer, with membership in the Bar Association of the City of New York, and for off-time (and maybe client-getting time) in the Apawamis Club and the Manursing Island Club.

HUNTLEY, JAMES WARREN; 1826½ North Normandie, Los Angeles, Cal.: Jim is one of the Air Corps officers who made good on the "happy landings" idea, and entered business in the west after the war. He is now a partner in the contracting firm of Gates & Huntley in Los Angeles, and likes his golf as well, or a bit better, than the next man. Despite his residence in the city of angels, Jim has yet to marry one of them.

ILL, CARL H.; 505 Clifton Ave., Newark, N. J.: With a father, uncle and brother in the medical profession, Carl followed their example as soon as he got out of college, interrupting his medical studies only long enough to be a junior grade lieutenant in the Navy during the war. In 1918 he received his M.D. from Columbia and in 1922 married Jeannette Seymour; their children are Jane Seymour (15), Charles L. II (13) and Helen R. (8). Carl is a member of the Academy of Medicine of Northern New Jersey, and the New Jersey Obstetrical Society and won his F.A.C.S. in 1929. His favorite sport is sailing, where no telephone calls nor expectant fathers can reach him.

INGERSOLL, ROBERT STURGIS; Penllyn, Pa.: Sturge has a lengthy list of accomplishments to his credit. To begin with, he not only graduated but also was married in 1914 and is now the Class Grandfather. His wife was Marion B. Fowle; they have five children, Robert S., Jr. (23), formerly of the Princeton class of 1938; George F. (22), formerly of the class of 1940; Phebe W. (21); Charles E. (16), who will be in the class of 1944, and Harry (14). The Class grandson, Robert Sturgis Ingersoll III, born November 30, 1937, is the child of Robert S., Jr., and the former Harriet Archer. Sturgis secured his LL.B. from the University of Pennsylvania in 1921, after a war-time career as a first lieutenant of Infantry; he practices in Philadelphia with the firm of Ballard, Spahr, Andrews, and Ingersoll, at No. 1035 Land Title Building. He is, moreover, a trustee of the Philadelphia Museum of Art, vice-president of the Zoological Society of the same city; trustee of the Philadelphia Orchestra Society and of the Fairmount Park Art Association; president of the English-Speaking Union, Philadelphia Branch; president of the Penllyn Club, and former president of the Print Club. He also finds time to act as manager of the Philadelphia Savings Fund Society, director of the North Pennsylvania Railroad, and is connected with the Midland Valley Railroad and the Muskogee Company. Sturge is interested in his spare moments, if any, in oil paintings and sculpture and the acquiring thereof. He wrote "Open that Door!", published by J. B. Lippincott & Co., in 1916.

INGRAHAM, FRED; 146 Ingraham Blvd., Hempstead, N. Y.

IVES, ANSON JESSE; 824 Nira St., South Jacksonville, Fla.: After the war, in which he served as a captain in the Air Corps, Jess returned home to Savannah, where he engaged in the real estate business. He later moved to Florida and is now in the mortgage and sales department of the Mal Haughton Jr. Co., in Jacksonville. Jess married Catherine Frances Ellis in 1922 and has two children, Elizabeth N. (8) and William M. (5). Despite the fishing for which his adopted state is famous, the Ives outdoor athletics are confined to golf.

JAMESON, DONALD; 4644 Central Ave., Indianapolis, Indiana: Don, nephew of Booth Tarkington and celebrated in his own right remains as always a resident and guiding spirit of the Hoosier State. He was married to Margaret Booth in 1915. Their oldest child Patricia (19) is in the Class of 1939 at Holton-Arms College, Washington, D. C.; Margaret (17) and Fenton Booth Jameson (13) are their other two children. Don's business activities center around securities and automobile finance. He is president of the Equitable Securities Company, of Indianapolis, and also director of the Diamond Chain Company, the Priscilla Realty Corporation, the American Finance Conference, the Hoosier Association of Finance Companies, is a member of the Rotary Club, the Indianapolis Camera Club, and the Scottish Rite and Blue Lodges of American Masonry. In 1916-17 Don was a member of the State Legislature of Indiana, thus qualifying as one of 1914's well-known solons. His hobby is photography, and he has won local prizes therefor from the Camera Club of his native city, and for newspaper snapshots in the Indianapolis News.

JEWETT, JOHN H., JR.; 32 High St., Lyons, N. Y.: After graduation, Johnny returned to the family silk interests in Yokohama, Japan, where he remained for many years. He has since come back to permanent residence in the United States, and is connected with the Kenmore Machine Products Co., in Lyons, having several patents for silk spinning machinery to his credit. John's first marriage terminated in divorce, and in 1933 he married Harriet A. Fellows. He has no children.

JOHNSON, MIERS C.; Carlsbad, New Mexico: The old Texan has taken over New Mexico, the land of the rising and shining sun. Miers, no longer the retail lumber king of El Paso, now is ye genial host, the inn-keeper par excellence. As president of Southwestern Hotels, Inc., Johnny delightfully swings and struts his stuff. He can be reached, when not off hunting and fishing, at the La Caverna Hotel, in Carlsbad. That the old ties may not be altogether severed, Miers is also connected with the Burton-Lingo Company, of Fort Worth, Texas. The Masonic fraternity also claims him. He was, too, first lieutenant, 73rd Coast Artillery, some twenty years ago.

Johnny was married in 1920 to Rose Vernon. Three boys have blessed-vented their home, Miers C., Jr. (14), John Vernon (8), and Burton (now 1 year). That 1914 might not be found deficient in the field of statesmanship, in addition to our judges and legislators, let it be proudly paeaned forth that the Mayor of Carlsbad, New Mexico, in 1934 and 1935, was our own Miers C. Johnson. We do not like to descend from this high plane, but gentle readers will remember that it was in the same year of 1934, at our Twentieth Reunion, that Johnny came back to Princeton for the first time since graduation, and he stayed a whole week.

JOHNSTON, HOMER K.; 112 St. Joseph Ave., Long Beach, Cal.: Johnny stayed in Princeton a year after the rest of us left, to get his M.A. in 1915. The following year he married Ethel Hockett and later engaged in newspaper work in the west; he is now Sunday editor of the Press-Telegram of Long Beach. Other activities include membership in Optimist International and a faculty position in the Adult Education Department of the local public schools; Johnny is also interested in Boy Scout work and likes to spend his holidays on camping trips. The Johnsons have two sons, Hugh James (21), a senior at the University of California, and Bruce Foster (19), a sophomore at Pomona College.

KASSLER, GEORGE W.; 227 16th St., Santa Monica, Cal.: George took an M.B.A. away from Harvard in 1916 and then signed up as a second lieutenant in the 341st Field Artillery for the war. He married Helen Sullivan in 1926 and they have two daughters, Mary Carol (10) and Claire (8). His favorite recreations are golf and music, and investment banking is his chief business interest. George is head of the statistical department of W. R. Staats Co., 640 South Spring St., Los Angeles, Cal., and president of the Investment Statisticians of Los Angeles.

KELLOGG, PAUL V.; 233 Highland Ave., Highland Park, N. J.: Following the war, Paul retained his commission in the Regular army, now holding the rank of major and the distinction of being the only Class representative permanently in Military service. He has seen duty at many posts in this country and our island possessions and is at present assigned to the Military Department of Rutgers University; in 1922 he authored the "R.O.T.C. Manual," published by the University of Missouri Publishing Co., and a standard reference work in its field. When he is off duty he experiments with the mysteries of trajectories and aiming points as applied to tennis balls when he applies a racquet to them. Paul married Katherine L. Newman in 1918 and commands a home guard of Paul V., Jr. (17), who will be Princeton '43, Oscar W. N. (10) and Elinor (16).

KELLY, AUBRY D.; Park Circle, Scarsdale, N. Y.: Aubry, late ensign U. S. Navy, is now sales manager of the textile firm of George Elbogen Co., New York City. He married Eleanor F. Stumpf in 1929 and has three children, Constance Adele (8), Carol Marie (6) and Carla Pierre (2). Aubry's interests are varied: professionally, he is a member of the American Association of Textile Technologists and Phi Psi, of the Philadelphia Textile School; in behalf of his home community he is a member of the East Scarsdale Association, and when the wind and weather are right—and also when they are not—he is an avid boatman.

KENT, MOSS A.; 29 Heatherbloom Road, White Plains, N. Y.: Belabored is the word for Moss. Say "N. L. R. B." or "Wagner" to him and he will not turn a hair. For the manufacturing director of an outfit like General Cable Corporation, not to mention a member of the Rate Fixing Group for the labor end of the electrical industry, knows his wages and hours as he knows the hopes and ambitions—and the foibles—of his general foremen. Moss is a director of the Wire Association and a consultant of the N. E. M. A.—National Electrical Manufacturers Association to the likes of you—as well as a member of the A. M. A.—uh, uh, American Manufacturers Association—and the A. S. T. M., on which you can roll your own. When he leaves the Graybar Building of an evening, unless he goes home in the afternoon, the sissy, he hies him back to a wife who used to be Florence R. Corbet. There he can turn to photography, to books, if any, and visiting friends to make life worth while.

KILNER, EHRICK B.; 110 Park Ave., Greenwich, Conn.: Our former hockey star has long since eschewed the thick ice of Lake Carnegie for the much thinner ice of the Stock Exchange floor, but he still manages to keep his balance as a partner in the brokerage firm of Carreau & Co., 63 Wall St., New York. His financial wizardry also permits him to keep a very sizable balance in the Class funds of which he has been watch dog since 1934. During the war Ehrick had the unique record of training with the Cavalry, getting a lieutenant's commission in the Field Artillery, and ending up with an assignment as a signal officer with the Infantry! He was discharged before they could put him in the Navy, and married Lila Daniel in 1919; their children are Lila (18), Hope (16), Joan (14), and Marguerite (12). Ehrick's favorite avocations are fishing, hunting, tennis and raising bird dogs. Besides maintaining an active interest in Princeton and Class affairs, Ehrick is a member of Acacia Lodge 85, F. and A. M.

KLIPSTEIN, GERALD PHILIP; 218 Prospect St., East Orange, N. J.: Klip has come at last like most of us to the delights of a family. Twenty-one years after graduation he married Mrs. Madalene Simonton and has a step-daughter, Mrs. Jeanne Stevens and a grandchild, Sandra Jeanne Stevens. He is president of Domestic Appliances, Inc., at 457 Main St. in East Orange—with a hobby of tuning up gadgets. Klip is a member of Lions International and the Triumph Commandery in Arlington. During the war he was a sergeant in the Medical Corps of the Seventh Division.

KUHN, WENDEL S.; 50 Banks St., Chicago, Ill.: After trying Pittsburgh and California as homes, Wen decided that Chicago looked best to him, and so has been there for the last thirteen years, all of them with Winthrop Mitchell & Co., stock brokers. By 1932 he decided that he had settled down, and married Mary Coggeshall. There are four little Kuhns, and a feeling of youth comes back to us at reading their ages: Ann Coggeshall (5), Wendel Speer, Jr. (3½), Sarah (1½), and Mary, who at the date of filling the questionnaire had only six weeks behind her. When they ask daddy what he did in the Great War, Wen can tell them that he was a first lieutenant in the 363d Infantry, a 93d Division regiment.

LAIRD, JOHN A.; Chestnut Place, Short Hills, N. J.: Jack's career got off to an active start immediately following graduation. He began it by going to Columbia Law School from which he received his LL.B. in 1917, and at once thereafter changed his academic gown for the uniform of a lieutenant in the Naval Air Service in which he served throughout the war. In 1918 he married Hazel E. Russell; they have three children, Alicia (16), John (11), and Lindsay (8). The boys are headed for Princeton but in exactly what class deponent saith not. Following his discharge from the Navy, Jack entered into legal practice in Newark, N. J., as a partner in the firm of Heinie and Laird. This connection was terminated in 1938 when Jack was appointed attorney for New Jersey for the Delaware, Lackawanna and Western R. R., with offices at 140 Cedar St., New York, N. Y. The commuting from New Jersey which this entails is somewhat alleviated for Counsellor Laird by the fact that he has a pass on the railroad. Jack has continued his interest in Princeton affairs, having held several offices in the Lackawanna Alumni Association; he doesn't play much baseball nowadays but can still scamper around a tennis court in no mean manner. When there are no tennis courts available, Jack goes in with equal vim for deep sea fishing.

LASKIN, BENJAMIN; 6310 Wissahickon Ave., Germantown, Pa.: Ben, who was a sergeant in the Ordnance Department during the late unpleasantness, commutes regularly to Philadelphia. Ben was married in 1921 and his daughter, Anne (14), is preparing for the class of 1946 at Bryn Mawr. Ben is in the manufacturing business and is secretary and treasurer of Laskin Bros., Inc., 226 South 11th St., Philadelphia.

LAUGHLIN, HENRY A.; Concord, Mass.: After the war, Henry swapped his Field Artillery lieutenant's sword in favor of a printer's stick, and is now a director of the publishing and book manufacturing firm of Houghton Mifflin Co.—The Riverside Press at Cambridge, Mass. In 1916 he married Rebecca Lord, and they have a daughter and son, Rebecca Ledlie (21), a junior at Bryn Mawr-Sorbonne, and Henry A., Jr. (20), who is Princeton '41. Henry is a trustee of St. Paul's School, and has just finished a three-year term as Road Commissioner of Concord; from 1928 to 1934 he served on the Town Finance Committee.

LEAR, CHARLES B.; Greencastle, Pa.

LE COMPTE, CHARLES R.; 30 Caranetta Drive, Lakewood, N. J.: Charley took his E.E. at Princeton in 1916.

LEGENDRE, JAMES HENNON; 820 New Orleans Bank Building, New Orleans, La.: Hennon was a lieutenant with the Marines during the war and was awarded the D.S.C. from both the Army and Navy, as well as the Croix de Guerre with palm from the French.

LESLIE, ARNETT W.; 2424 Lake Place, Minneapolis, Minn.: Arnett, former ensign, U. S. Naval Reserve, and Frances Jones were married in 1921, and now qualify as one of 1914's larger families with four children, A. Wells, Jr. (16), Annetta (13), Frances (11), and David (9). Apparently "college" has not yet been decided but it looks like two prospective Princeton undergraduates from Minneapolis. As president of the John Leslie Paper Co. in Minneapolis and St. Paul, Minn., and Great Falls, Montana, there is plenty to keep Arnett busy, but when occasion offers, his chief recreation is hunting and fishing. And for diversion book and stamp collecting are first choice, along with interest in the Masonic Blue Lodge.

LEVERING, LEONIDAS, JR.; Calvert Court Apartments, Calvert and 31st Streets, Baltimore, Md.: Lev has always remained a 100% Baltimorean, except for time out to be a second lieutenant in the Field Artillery in 1917 and 1918, and is now president of the Central Warehouse Co., Inc., of Baltimore. He is a member of the Maryland Warehousemen's Association, and of the Maryland Club in which he has won his "M" as a golf, backgammon and bridge enthusiast. In 1925 Lev married Lillian G. Kirby; they have no children.

LICHTENSTEIN, ADOLPH B.; 515 Park Ave., New York City: Ben, who was married to Helen Hirshon in 1920, after serving as a second lieutenant in the 147th Field Artillery, is the father of two children, Marion B. (16), and Robert E. (13), Princeton (to be) 1946. His marriage was terminated by divorce. He serves as a specialist as a member of the New York Stock Exchange and is connected with Morris & Company, of 61 Broadway, New York City. Ben is also director of many charitable organizations, including Beth-Israel Hospital in Newark, N. J.

LLOYD, EDWARD JR.; 716 Madison Ave., New York: Bummy was once known as lieutenant (senior grade) of the U.S.S. Florida. As you can guess, he fought the war in the Navy and for quite a few years afterwards survived many other battles as one of New York's leading bachelors. In 1934 he was married to Constance R. Matlack and they now have one child, Joanna Leigh (16 months). Having joined the great married class, it is now his ambition to push Tookie Goldsmith and Bus Brown into matrimony. Bummy is in the investment banking business, associated with the First Boston Corporation as assistant manager, investment department, at 100 Broadway, New York. Apparently there is time left over from the investment business to devote to sailing and tennis. It is our guess that there is somewhat more emphasis on the former.

LONG, CHRISTOPHER STERRY; 304 East Wales St., Pontiac, Ill.: Baron has devoted most of his post-college career to the public weal, although he also has found time to become president of his own manufacturing company. He has been city treasurer as well as mayor of Pontiac, served for three years as assistant deputy administrator of the N. R. A., and from 1928 to 1937 held the rank of major in the Illinois National Guard. (During the war he was a first lieutenant of Infantry.) In 1914 Baron married Helen Ryan; their children are Elizabeth Ann (22), who is a senior at De Pauw, and John Sterry (17), who will enter Wabash next year.

LOVELAND, ERNEST K.; 204 Hampton St., Cranford, N. J.: After graduation, Ernie became an agriculturist in Moscow (Pennsylvania, not Russia), and in 1916 married Ethel May Coble. They have three children, Betty M. (21), who graduates this year from Cedar Crest College; Joseph W. (19), who is a Dartmouth sophomore, and Richard K. (8). In 1929 Ernie took his M.A. at Teachers College, N. Y., and since then he has devoted his talents to teaching; he now heads the Latin Department on the Cranford, N. J., Board of Education. He is also professionally active in the N. J. State Teachers Association, the American Classical League and the Association of State High School Teachers and as a public-spirited member of his community is director of the Cranford Welfare Association and the Cranford Dramatic Club as well as a member of the local F. & A. M.

LUKE, WILLIAM G.; 150 Corona Ave., Pelham, N. Y.: Bill and Beula Sigler were married in 1916 and have three well-grown children, William G., Jr. (21), Cornell 1939; Douglass S. (20), Rutgers 1942; Marion L. (19), Dana Hall 1938. Ever since college, Bill has been connected with the family business, West Virginia Pulp & Paper Company, 230 Park Ave., New York City, specializing in the sales department. When opportunity offers, golfing is his out-doors choice and photography and book collecting are his hobbies. He has always maintained the active interest in Class affairs that he showed as our first vice-president "way back in Freshman year."

LYND, ROBERT S.; 75 Central Park West, New York City: It is difficult to decide whether Bob should be classified as an author or a professor, for he has achieved fame in both lines of endeavor. He took his Ph.D. at Columbia in 1930 and is now a professor on the Graduate Faculty of Political Science in that university. On the other hand, he married Helen Merrell in 1921 and with her collaboration wrote two best-sellers, "Middletown" and "Middletown in Transition," published by Harcourt, Brace in 1929 and 1937 respectively. They are regarded as the most authoritative sources on the economic and social life of American small towns. Bob also contributed the chapter on "People as Consumers" to President Hoover's study on "Recent Social Trends," 1930. In 1938 he delivered the series of four Stafford Little lectures on "American Culture and the Social Sciences" at Princeton; these are to be published in book form by the University Press. From 1933 to 1936 he was a member of the Consumers' Advisory Board of the N. R. A. At present Bob is enjoying his Sabbatical year abroad, indulging in his favorite hobbies of mountain climbing, canoeing and swimming with Mrs. Lynd and their two children, Staughton (8) and Andrea (4).

MacCOLL, JAMES R., Jr.; 50 Millard Ave., Bronxville, N. Y.: Bob is one of our cotton-broking coterie who has constantly remained in that line of activity since graduation; he is now vice-president of Federated Textiles, Inc., with offices in New York City. He is also a member of the Princeton Club of N. Y., the Union League and the U. S. Chamber of Commerce. In 1917—the same year he hid himself to war on the decks of the U. S. S. Ontario—Bob married Louise Kimbark; their children are James Robert, IV (20), who is a sophomore at Princeton and one of the assistant managers of the football team; Mary (18) and E. Kimbark (13), who is marked for Princeton '47.

MacMAHON, JOHN FARREN; 1367 North State St., Chicago, Ill.: Although Jim at first thought he'd be a lawyer, he switched en route—with a detour through the war as a machine gun lieutenant—in favor of merchandising work. He is now a sales executive in the Chicago office of the Sinclair Refining Co. Jim's other interests are the Rotary Club and the Foreign Relations Club and his favorite sport is swimming. In one important respect, the passing years have left him unchanged from undergraduate days: Jim was the youngest man in the Class in 1914, and he still is. Because of this, the fact that Jim has never married is no reason for worry; he has plenty of time yet.

MacMILLAN, EDWARD ALLEN; 160 Prospect Ave., Princeton, N. J.: American Society of Civil Engineers, A. A. E., Soc. Am. Milit. Engrs.—so runs Ed's record of vocational appendages—all but one: lieutenant-colonel in the Corps of Engineers Reserve, since 1938. He started on the road to that with the war, up through the 1st Engineers to captain—with the Croix de Guerre with palm on the way. He keeps in form with accurate trigger fingers at his pet pastime of skeet. But he proves his engineering acumen by getting paid to live in Princeton. He married Helen Applegate in 1923. Our lofty elms will so gently break the twilight crescent moon's soft light this June as the near-grave 25-year-old seniors take the steps for a night. Take that on the word of a superintendent of grounds and buildings that loves his elms even better than his arms.

MANNHEIM, SIGMUND; 935 Park Ave., New York City: Following graduation Sig went into medicine via Columbia, where he got his M.D. in 1918. He specialized in eye, ear, nose and throat troubles and for some years was head of that department at St. Luke's Hospital, New York. He now is engaged in private practice. Sig married in 1920 and has two children, Alfred (14), destined for Princeton '45, and Susan (11). He is a member of the American Medical Association, New York Academy of Medicine, County Medical Society of New York and Alpha Omega Alpha.

MARCH, MILO L.; Lake Shore Drive, Long Beach, Michigan City, Ind.: After graduation Milo went to England and took a B.A. at Oxford in 1919; in 1926 he took his M.A. there, and married Bertha Johnson. Returning to native soil he went into banking and is now assistant vice-president of the City National Bank and Trust Co. of Chicago. He has no children.

MATTER, ROBERT; 616 Second National Bank Bldg., Houston, Texas.

MAYER, W. FREDERICK; 420 Orchard St., Southmont, Johnstown, Pa.: Fritz still leads a busy life. He took his degree in medicine from Johns Hopkins in 1918, was a first lieutenant in the Medical Corps, and married Leone Raab in 1919. Today he is pediatrician-in-chief at the Conemaugh Valley Memorial Hospital, and attending pediatrician at the Johnstown Municipal Hospital. His professional connections testify his standing and worth: Fellow American Medical Association, Pennsylvania State Medical Society; past-president, Cambria County Medical Society; Fellow, American Academy of Pediatrics; director of Red Cross, Well Baby Clinic, and Licentiate, American Board of Pediatrics. As a baby doctor should, he keeps his interest in youth, and since New Year's last year has been a member of the Southmont School Board. So Gretchen (12) is headed for Vassar '49 and Fritz (9) will graduate from Princeton in 1951. Fritz finds time for some golf and bridge—and talks Princeton to the fathers and mothers of the F. F. J.—(sure, First Families of Johnstown).

McCLELLAN, REYBURN; R.R. No. 3, Xenia, Ohio: For your next motor smash-up try Xenia—partly because the hotel is decrepit (or was a few years back), but mainly because you will be in the good hands of one of the resident partners of the broad and spacious McClellan Hospital. Mac went to Harvard Medical School, with a spell in the Army's Medical Corps, after marrying Alice Bradford Carleton the year after graduating with the best of Princeton's classes. Their four hostages to fate are Harvey Bradford (20), who gets his degree this June from Oberlin; Charlotte (18) is a freshman at Wooster; the two younger daughters are Margaret (16) and Mary (12). Member of the Ohio State Medical Association, the American Medical Association and the American College of Surgeons, Mac drops his scalpel to turn his eyes to the heavens or the flowers, as an amateur astronomer and botanist, and will also drop it, let's hope, to let his classmates see him and his family this June.

McCORMICK, JOHN KENNEDY; 54 Academy St., Arlington, Mass.: Mac married Eleanor Hatch in 1916 and is now a confirmed New Englander in home and business. He is treasurer of the hardwood lumber firm of Henry J. Winde Co., Charlestown, Mass., and gave an assist to Harvard in the person of his son, John K., Jr. (19), who graduates at Cambridge this year. Mac's other children are Eleanor (21) and Mary (16).

McELDOWNEY, ROBERT M.; 802 Luzerne St., Johnstown, Pa.: Bob served as a captain of Infantry during the war, afterwards going into banking. He is now president of McEldowney Motors, Inc., a director of the First Federal Savings and Loan Bank, in Johnstown, a director of the Cambria City Emergency Relief, and from 1931 to 1935 served on the council of Westmont Borough; he is also a member of the American Legion, the Sons of the American Revolution and the B. P. O. E. Bob's first marriage terminated in divorce, and in 1935 he married Gertrude Phillips. He has three children: Robert, Jr. (19), who is a junior at Princeton; Helen (18), who is a sophomore at Smith, and Ann D. (15).

McLANAHAN, STEWART KENNEDY; P. O. Box 368, Shidler, Okla.: Stew might well acknowledge no home address, but a post office box, in spite of having a charming wife, Myrtle Kulling, married these fifteen years, and little Miss Mary Catherine, their two-year-old daughter. Shidler boasts some 1,177 population, but the Mid-Continent Petroleum Corporation boasts more of its Shidler production superintendent. Let a crew of "roughnecks" and their driller bring in a new test well, under control, and a supe can stay home with the missus and the kid. But when a gusher spews mud and oil over half a dozen sections or bursts into a roaring inferno of flame, your supe knows no home for maybe days on end. Stew learned to cope with such as a first lieutenant of the 150th Field Artillery. He is still sergeant-at-arms of the Rainbow Division, Veterans' National Association. He's a 32nd degree Scottish Rite Mason over at Guthrie, a mere 75 miles or so away. Come summer, there are golf and jaunts to Colorado and elsewhere for hunting and an occasional glimpse of a Classmate. Always there are his family and friends—and Princeton, what with a father, brothers and friends from 1873 onwards.

McLEAN, JAMES; 102 Stewart Ave., Garden City, L. I.: Jim's first activity after 1914 was getting himself an LL.B. at the New York Law School in 1917. Then in due course he became that hybrid of lawyer and banker known as a trust officer, and has been one ever since. His advice can be obtained at the City Bank Farmers Trust Co. As might be guessed, the citizens of Garden City have seen the light and made him village treasurer (1936). Jim was married in 1920 to Helen A. Witzel, and has three daughters, Margaret (17), who is to be Wellesley 1943; Betty (16), Connecticut Woman's College 1944, and Jean, who hasn't decided yet. Jim's organizational affiliations are the Bankers Club of Brooklyn, Montauk Lodge, St. Andrew's Society, and the Caledonian Hospital. If these pall on him he turns to golf and fishing.

McKOWN, GILBERT CAMPBELL; 1117 West King St., Martinsburg, W. Va.: If you want to know the state of the nation, go to its editors, especially in towns like the one where Gil is, say around 15,000. In case you don't recall, it's in that easternmost section of West Virginia, roughly half way between Virginia's Winchester and Maryland's Hagerstown. Gil is editor of the daily newspaper, The Journal, and he edits it well, with a circulation that would shame many a metropolitan news sheet, better than one copy for every family in town and two-fifths left over to blanket the surrounding areas. Gil learned to call his shots back in the Field Artillery Training School, but he was born with journalism in his blood. There is not much solid substance in his neck of the world that he does not have his solid foot near, what with Kiwanis and Masonry, the West Virginia Newspaper Council and even the National Editorial Association. Five years after college he married Elizabeth Trimble. They have no children of their own to send, but they do a lot of steering of other boys toward Princeton. Here's hoping they set their own course north and east this June.

McMASTER, PHILIP D.; Westover Park, Stamford, Conn.: In spite of heading on to the U. of Penn. for his M.D. degree in 1918, Phil maintains his well-remembered sense of humor. The McMaster family goes in for sailing on the Sound and music in the home—sound-proofed, no doubt. "Prizes or other official recognition in the above," says Phil, "amount to, alas, countless bric-a-brac horrors of the 5 & 10 variety as race prizes, and for the latter only a few bad eggs." Useful these last may be to him for his researches as an associate member of the Rockefeller Institute for Medical Research, which, in case you can drop in on Phil, is located at York Ave. and 66th St., New York City—and not in Rockefeller Center. If loath to loan him your carcass as an amateur guinea pig, you can read him, mostly in The Journal of Experimental Medicine, for he has written some sixty articles on various phases of experimental medicine. You'll be in good hands, for, like the joining medicos, his list of professional affiliations is long and notable: American Society for Experimental Pathology, American Association of Pathologists and Bacteriologists, Society for Experimental Biology and Medicine, American Association for the Advancement of Science, plus a couple of honorary fraternities—dear old Sigma Xi (scientific) and A. O. A. (guess your own answer to that one in these days of initials; but as a tip, it's medical). He has joined no military organizations since the war, where he was a first lieutenant in the Medical Corps. Phil and his wife, who used to be Elizabeth Dwight before 1923, have two youngsters—Abigail Parsons (10) and Philip Robert Bache (8).

McPHERSON, PAUL CRERAR; 15 East Main St., Hudson, Ohio: Paul moved west after the war, in which he was a Naval lieutenant (J. G.), and engaged in advertising work. His marriage to Margaret Shedd occurred in 1918 and they have four children: Paul S. (18) is in the Class of '44 at Chicago University, but Duncan (16) and Rene (14) have seen the light and are heading for Princeton; Margaret (8) will attend Princeton proms from Miss Porter's School in the Class of '50. Paul is a member of the American Marketing Society and is properly active in his local alumni circles; he is also a golfer and, with quite un-Scotch abandon, is an expert penny pitcher.

MEAD, SUMNER ADELBERT; R.F.D. No. 1, Barrington, Ill.: Apparently Sumner had enough of the sea when he finished his trick as ensign on the U. S. S. Orizaba in 1918, for he promptly settled himself well inland. He is now president of the manufacturing firm of Dwinell-Wright Co. of Boston and a director of the Associated Grocery Manufacturers of America, and also serves as an associate editor of a trade magazine; his non-professional interests are centered in the University Club of Chicago. Sumner married Ruth Appeldoorn in 1923 and has three children, Sumner and Peter (14), who are Class Twins No. 3, and John (10).

MEEKER, HARVEY H.; 494 Richmond Ave., Maplewood, N. J.: The father of three sons, Harvey has already achieved a niche for himself in our Class Hall of Fame. Harvey H., Jr. (19), is a member of the Class of 1941 at Princeton, and is by the same token the first holder of the Julius Ochs Adler Scholarship, recently founded. William Q. (14) expects to enroll in the Class of 1946, and his brother, Donald C. (13), will be in 1947. Harvey's wife is the former Clara Cooper, whom he married in 1917. Harvey is in the contracting business, engaged chiefly in building construction, as he has been for the last fifteen or twenty years; his business address and his home coincide, thereby neatly saving rent, overhead and what have you. (Business of parenthetically wishing that more of us could go and do likewise). He was formerly with Booth & Flinn, Ltd., 17 Battery Place, New York City, but now is the owner of his own business and captain and pilot of his own construction ship. Hunting and fishing, if, when, as and how, lure Harvey from home and fireside on occasion. Pretty soon he'll be able to retire from business and pleasure both and let his three lucky sons support him.

MERTZ, EDWARD HINE; 34 Ordway St., N. W., Washington, D. C.: A war-time U. S. Marine, Ed and Elizabeth Bryant Torbert were married in 1920. Their family consists of Elizabeth Anne (17), who will attend George Washington University, and Edward Hine, Jr. (14). Ed is an official of the Interstate Commerce Commission in Washington and is a member of Theta Delta Chi. He received his LL.B. from the National University in 1932. Tennis, swimming and gardening are his spare-time activities.

MESSINGER, CARL WORDIN; 237 Linden Ave., Clayton, Mo.: During the war Carl was a captain with the 12th Division. On his return to civil life he joined the Stanley Works at New Britain, Conn., and later went with the Budd Body Company in Philadelphia. He is now district sales manager for the Allegheny Ludlum Steel Co. of Pittsburgh, Pa. Carl married Mary Speed O'Connor in 1920; they have four children, Frances Middlebrook (17), who is at Bennett Junior College; Carl W., Jr. (14), Roderick Gordon (13) and Marianna (12). The boys are Princeton-bound. Carl is a member of the American Society for Metals, the American Welding Society and the Princeton Club of St. Louis; he reports his avocations as (a) his children and (b) tennis.

MIDDLETON, WILLIAM SHERK; 25 N. 19th St., Camp Hill (Harrisburg), Pa.: One of Harrisburg's leading citizens, Bill and his wife, the former Gertrude R. Lantz (they were married in 1926) are raising two young Middletons for Princeton, William Lantz (10) and Robert Jones (9), entering the Classes of 1950 and 1951, respectively. In addition to the practice of law, Bill has held, since 1921, the office of Deputy Prothonotary, Dauphin County Common Pleas Court, and is active in numerous civic and charitable and church duties. A member of the Pennsylvania Bar Association, West Shore Lodge, F. & A. M. No. 681, of Pennsylvania and member of Board Harrisburg Area, Council Boy Scouts of America, general superintendent of the Market Square Presbyterian Church Sunday School, and Clerk of Session. With all this Bill still has time for gardening and swimming when the season permits.

MIEROW, HERBERT EDWARD; 224 E. San Rafael, Colorado Springs, Colo.: Herb has consistently followed the rôle of educator he set for himself in college. In 1922 he got his A.M. at Princeton and three years later his Ph.D., also from Old Nassau. He married Flora Judd in 1923 and now holds the Gile professorship at Colorado College, where he is chairman of the Classics Department. Meanwhile he has found time to contribute various articles to numbers of professional journals. Herb has no children.

MILLER, DICK C.; 1036 Hollywood Place, West Palm Beach, Fla. (mail address, P. O. Box 509): Dick hasn't been back since his undergrad days, but he still maintains a lively interest in Princeton and the Class, and the latchstring is always out for '14ers passing by his home. He is district manager of the Gulf Life Insurance Co. of Jacksonville, although he originally intended to enter the law, via an LL.B. from the Benton College of Law in St. Louis. Living where he does, it is only natural that he should be an ardent sailor and golfer, and he also is enrolled in the ranks of the American Legion, the Forty and Eight, Kiwanis, the Masons, and the National Life Underwriters Association; he was in the Navy 1917-18. Dick married Maude E. MacKenzie in 1923.

MILLER, SHACKELFORD, JR.; Upper River Road, Louisville, Ky.: A Democrat from Kentucky, Cunnel Shack Miller practices and teaches law in Kentucky. He was married, in 1917, to Frances S. Effinger, who died in May, 1931. Frances E. Miller (18), the older of their two daughters, is in the Class of 1942 at Vassar. Margaret H. Miller (11), will possibly grace the same institution of feminine learning in Poughkeepsie, N. Y., when her turn comes for higher education. Among the officers of the United States in the late World War appears the name of Captain S. Miller, Jr., of the 325th Field Artillery, who is none other than our own Shack. Returned from the wars, he is senior partner of the firm of Miller and Grafton, attorneys at law, 1517-20 Kentucky Home Life Building, Louisville. He is also instructor in contracts and equity at Jefferson School of Law, also in Louisville. Our legal brother is a member of the Louisville Bar Association and of the American Bar Association. He was Special Attorney representing U. S. A. in Slum Clearance litigation, in his native city, from November, 1934 to March, 1936. He was Agency Counsel, Reconstruction Finance Corporation, connected with the R. F. C. Mortgage Company, and the Disaster Loan Corporation, from November, 1935 to October, 1938. He has been receiver for The Banco Kentucky Company since October, 1935. Shack's one avocation or hobby seems to be his real vocation—"politics." He remains to this day, since 1932, chairman of the Democratic County Executive Committee of Jefferson County, Kentucky. He was primary campaign manager, from February to August, 1938, for Senator Alben W. Barkley, and State campaign manager of all the Democratic candidates in the fall of 1938. Shack was recently appointed a Federal judge of the Fifth Circuit.

MINTON, HENRY COLLIN, JR.; Longacres, Lawrenceville, N. J.: Mint went right into law from Princeton, via an LL.D from Penn in 1917 and has been in it ever since, with time out to be a first lieutenant in Ordnance. At present he is in partnership with our own Midge Rogers, with offices in the Trenton Trust Company Building, Trenton, N. J. He is a member of the American Bar Association, the N. J. State Bar Association and the Mercer County Bar Association, and also belongs to the American Legion, Column Lodge, F. and A. M., V. F. W., Sons of the Revolution, the Trenton Club and the Princeton Club of Trenton. He carries his fondness for the court into his play time, for he is an ardent devotee of tennis (pseudo-legal joke). Mint married Alice Gale Dinsmore in 1926 and they have two daughters, Claire Louise (9) and Gale Dinsmore (12).

MONTGOMERY, FRANCIS A.; 407 Graham St., Pittsburgh, Pa.

MOORE, C. EARL; 309 Conestoga Road, Wayne, Pa.: Earl and Helen Fenimore Sutphin were married in 1917 and their daughter, Helen Louise, is now at Wilson College, class of 1941. Associated with Drexel & Co., 15th and Walnut Sts., Philadelphia, Earl has many interests outside of banking. He is an elder in the Bryn Mawr Presbyterian Church, a Mason (Cassia Lodge, Ardmore, Pa.), and a member of the Princeton Club of Philadelphia. He is also active in the Philadelphia Credit Men's Association and the Philadelphia Better Business Bureau, as well as president of the Bankers and Brokers Baseball League (Phila.). And, believe it or not, just recently he won the cup for the highest batting average.

MOORE, KENNETH WILLOUGHBY; 66 Battle Road, Princeton, N. J.: After graduation, Ken went into the advertising department of the Roebling Co., at Trenton and later had his own advertising agency in that city. After some years Ken decided to enter the ministry, turned his business over to his employees and took his B.D. at Union Theological Seminary in 1933. Princeton gave him his M.T. in 1934. He is now treasurer of the Presbyterian Board of Foreign Missions, 156 5th Ave., New York City. He is also a member of the foreign Policy Association. Ken married Margaret Perrine in 1915; she lived but a few years, and in 1933 he married Ella Mary Crimmins. They have one son, Kenneth Willoughby (3), who will attend his first Princeton preceptorials with the class of 1957.

MORRISEY, CHARLES W.; Keansburg, N. J.

MUEHLECK, GEORGE E.; 140 East 81st St., New York City: Dutch, who was in the Medical Reserve during the war, got his M.D. from Columbia in 1918. A year later he married Anne Fairley; their children are George E., Jr. (18), who is Princeton '41, and Fairley Louise (16), headed for Vassar '43. Dutch is a member of the New York Academy of Medicine and, besides his private practice, is associate attending surgeon of the Lenox Hill Hospital, New York City. In 1928 he was elected a Fellow of the American College of Surgeons. Outside of office hours, Dutch likes to fish when he isn't reading, and vice versa.

MULLER, EDWIN, JR.; New Milford, Conn.: Ed's vocation and avocation is mountain climbing here and abroad. He has written widely of this work, and lately has successfully branched out in fiction and feature articles of a more general nature. Ed's first marriage in 1916 terminated in divorce and in 1929 he married Mary Thayer. He has one son, Howard (19).

MURRAY, JAMES O.; 10 Crescent Road, Winchester, Mass.: Jim stayed on at Princeton for two years after graduation to gather an E.E., and after the war, in which he was a second lieutenant in the Air Corps, was for several years a sales engineer with the Weston Electrical Instrument Co. He is now running his own business of manufacturers' representative with offices at 126 Newbury St., Boston, Mass. He is a member of the Princeton Engineering Society and the Engineering Society of New England. Jim married Helen Harrington in 1918 and has two daughters, Helen (18), in the class of 1942 at Wells College, and Anne B. (13).

MYER, PETTIT A.; 135 Malden Terrace, Elizabeth, N. J.: Pettit chose stocks and bonds after leaving college and apparently has never regretted his choice, for he is still following that line of endeavor, in the sales department of Van Alstyne Noel & Co., 52 Broadway, New York City. He and Jessie Winans were married in 1916 and have two children, a girl and a boy; Virginia W. (20) is in the class of '39 at Pine Manor Junior College and C. Randolph (17) will matriculate at Princeton with the Class of '44. Pettit's favorite diversion is golf, at which he is so diverting that he holds the office of treasurer of the Elizabeth Town and Country Club.

MYERS, WILLIAM B.; Exchange Bank Bldg., Tallahassee, Fla.: Will, who is a lawyer in his home town, was seriously injured in an automobile accident during the past winter. He has, therefore, been unable to send us any details about himself except the all-important and pleasing fact that he is convalescing toward a complete recovery.

MYRICK, BURT E.; 9 Princeton Ave., Princeton, N. J.: Burt and 1914 are as inseparable as Castor and Pollux or Scotch and soda; as a member of the Class Executive Committee and manager of the Class House, his efforts in our behalf have been untiring and invaluable. During the war he served with the Air Service, and is now in the sales department of the investment banking firm of Graham, Parsons & Co., 1422 Walnut St., Philadelphia. In 1925 Burt married Katharine B. Apgar; their children are Sara Jane (12) and Burt E., Jr. (9). Burt is a member of the Sons of the Revolution and the Wilderness Club and is a golfer and skeet shooter of no mean ability, having won several local trophies through his indulgence in those hobbies.

NESBITT, RALPH B.; 28 Edgemont Ave., Summit, N. J.: It is a pity that Ralph does not give us a chance to put any of his experiences as a missionary and teacher in India into our Yearbook. In fact, he does not even mention that he was ever out of the country. That is always the trouble with these people who have had a chance to lead specially interesting lives. All he lets us know is that he got his M.A. at Columbia in 1927, which was seven years after he married Agnes T. Swenson. There are three little Nesbitts, Agnes Lillian (11), George Davis (9) and Lois Beryl (6). Ralph's avocations are gardening and (rather ambiguously) "games," by which we assume he does not mean "gaming." But this is a broad-minded age. In his profession he is assistant to the minister of the Central Presbyterian Church at Summit.

NEVINS, THEODORE C.; 257 Upper Mountain Ave., Montclair, N. J.: T. W. M. I. (Ted was married in 1917) T. A. G. (to Audrey Glasson) T. N. H. T. C. (they now have two children); Theodore C., Jr. (20), Princeton 1940, and Nancy Audrey (9) at Kimberly School. Ted is vice-president and general manager of Nevins Church Press, with executive and manufacturing offices in Bloomfield, N. J., and sales offices at 250 Park Ave., New York City. He is also affiliated with the National Industrial Conference Board, National Association of Manufacturers, National Association of Folding Carton Manufacturers and National Association of Label Manufacturers. Just why Ted refused to give only the initials of the above organizations is unexplained, for he can, and does still, make long speeches giving only the first letters of each word. At any rate, he lists golf as one of his favorite recreations.

NISSLEY, WARREN W.; 59 First Street, Garden City, Long Island, N. Y.: After serving as a first lieutenant, Field Artillery, during the war, Warren was married to Marguerite Francis Collins in 1922. The younger Nissleys are Marguerite (14) and Warren W., Jr. (11), who is scheduled one day to enter Princeton when, as and if the New Deal allows one to plan ahead. Warren is a partner in Arthur Young & Co., certified public accountants, and if you want to see him, just look for him at one of the company's following offices: New York, Chicago, Pittsburgh, Milwaukee, Kansas City, Dallas, Tulsa, Los Angeles, London, England, and Paris, France. If not at any one of these places he may be golfing, sailing or concentrating on "philately." During 1937-38 Warren gave a course on Principles of Budgetary Control at Columbia University.

NOBLE, SHELDON R.; Deer Lake Farm, Clarkston, Mich.: After being a second lieutenant in the 328th Field Artillery, Sal went into investment banking and is now vice-president of the American Industries Corporation. He married Eleanor Reed shortly after graduation; his present wife was Helen Bennett. Sal has three children, Herbert Weston (19), who is in the class of 1942 at Occidental; John Reed (18) and Elizabeth (13). He reports that his favorite avocation is playwrighting, as follows: "I had a play produced in New York in 1938 which was a flop; I have now returned to amateur standing."

NOURSE, RODERICK; Gramatan Gardens, Bronxville, N. Y.

O'CONNELL, JOHN HARLIN; 1192 Park Ave., New York: The famed name of the Pat of our youth lives on in his daughter, Patricia Kane (15). A full-fledged barrister by 1917, thanks to the New York Law School, Ensign Pat paused in the U. S. N. long enough to make the world safe for democracy—well, fairly safe—before settling down to legal practice in the canyons of lower New York. He likes the law and those in need of law like him, a member of the N. Y. State Bar Association as well as the American Bar Association. He does not neglect public affairs, what with the Pan-American Society, the American Geographical Society, nor the amenities of life with the Union Club and Turf & Field—a low handicap at that. But books! There's where you touch the O'Connell close to his heart. He belongs to The First Edition Club of London and the Newport Reading Room. He collects books of the 1890 period of English literature—and, true to the loyalties of all these years, is a member of the Council of "Friends of the Princeton Library." In 1937 Pat married Elizabeth Sands. In another year or two she may have him writing books of his own. Here's hoping!

O'NEILL, JOHN HENRY; 5228 Westminster Place, Pittsburgh, Pa.: Heiney practices law as a partner in the firm of Blaxter, O'Neill & Houston, at 1307 Oliver Building, in the proverbially Smoky City. He secured his right to be named a barrister with an LL.B. from the university of his native city in 1917. In addition to being director of Allegheny General Hospital and also of the Family Society of Allegheny County, he is a member of the American Bar Association, Pennsylvania State Bar Association, Allegheny County Bar Association, and president of the Princeton Alumni Association of Western Pennsylvania. Heiney enjoys golf and tennis with the best of them—and plays accordingly. He was married in 1929 to Eleanor G. Croft. In 1917 he served as first lieutenant, J. G. (junior grade to the uninitiate), on a submarine chaser, and the tale of what he caught up with while merrily engaging in the chase would indeed draw children from their play and old men from the fireside.

O'SULLIVAN, THOMAS C.; 43 Calton Road, New Rochelle, N. Y.: Irish followed another noted fellow-alumnus to Washington after graduation and was executive clerk at the White House from 1914 to 1917; during this time he also acquired an LL.B. from George Washington University. For the next two years he was a lieutenant in the Infantry, and then returned home to go into manufacturing. He is now an executive with Thorn-Tite Tops, Inc., 202 East 44th St., New York City. His marriage to Louise Lynch terminated in divorce and in 1925 he married Virginia Cram; he has four children, Benjamin deF. C. (22), and Princeton '39; Thomas C. Jr. (13), probably Princeton '48; Peter B. (7) and Virginia C. (6). All and sundry are hereby warned that Irish still ranks as a bridge expert.

OWLETT, G. MASON; Wellsboro, Pa.: Mase is a partner in the law firm of Owlett & Webb, in Wellsboro, but he is also one of the leading political figures in Pennsylvania. He has been a member of the State Senate since 1932 (his present term expiring in 1940), and in addition is a Republican National Committeeman from Pennsylvania. Mase married Sue E. Berkeley in 1918 and has two children, Ann Mary (17), who will go to Mount Holyoke, and Edward Howland (11), who will go to Princeton. He is a member of the Pennsylvania Society, American Bar Association, Pennsylvania Bar Association, Masons, I. O. O. F., and the National Economic Council; he is also a director in various banks, corporations, civic and charitable organizations. His hobbies are golf and photography (though not simultaneously).

PAINTER, J. L. D.; 704 Devonshire St., Pittsburgh, Pa.: After his Naval service as a lieutenant (J. G.) on the U. S. S. Montana and Nakomis in the war, Daws returned to Pittsburgh and entered the brokerage business. He is now a partner in the firm of Kay Richards & Company, Union Trust Building. He married Eleanor C. Hall in 1923; their daughter, Priscilla (14), started in Farmington last year and their son, William (11), is due for Princeton in the Class of 1948. Daws is an enthusiastic golfer, swimmer and shooter, and belongs to the Allegheny Country Club, the Rolling Rock Club and, for his more serious moments, the Pittsburgh Club.

PARKER, STUART; 183 Bay State Road, Boston, Mass.

PEGRAM, EDWARD SANDFORD, JR.; New Canaan, Conn.: Ed's war record in the Engineers was good enough to win him a permanent commission in that select Corps and he remained in the Regular service for several years, finally resigning with the rank of captain. He now conducts his own mineral exploration and consulting service in Spruce Pine, N. C. In 1922 Ed married Elizabeth F. LaBoyteaux, and has three children, Elizabeth (14), Edward S., III (9), and William LaB. (7); the marriage was terminated by divorce. Ed is a member of the Society of American Military Engineers and, in addition to making an avocation of his vocation, is also very partial to golf and fishing.

PHILLIPS, GEORGE FELTER; 80 Chapin Parkway, Buffalo, N. Y.: Before George went into the war—from which he emerged as major of Field Artillery—he improved each shining hour by getting his LL.B. from Columbia in 1917. He is now a senior partner in the Buffalo law firm of Kenefick, Cooke, Mitchell, Bass & Letchworth, in the Marine Trust Building, and a member of the American, New York State and Erie County Bar Associations. The high esteem in which George has always been held by his associates and which brought him the vice-presidency of the Class in freshman year and the presidency in sophomore and senior years has resulted in his appointments as director of Spencer Kellogg & Sons, Dunlop Tire & Rubber Corporation, State Trust Co., Marine Midland Corporation, Federal Mill, Inc., Children's Aid Society, Buffalo Eye and Ear Infirmary, Park School of Buffalo and the Buffalo Seminary; he is also a member of the Buffalo Club, Country Club of Buffalo, Buffalo Tennis and Squash Club and the University Club (New York). In 1921 George married Mary Weston and they have three children: Lydia Weston (15), Weston (10) and George F., Jr. (8). At the personal request of James Blackburn, Esq., let us all give a short cheer for George Phillips!

PIERCE, JOSIAH; Princeton Club, New York, N. Y.

PIERSON, RICHARD NORRIS; 10 Gracie Square, New York City.: Dick followed in his family's tradition of medicine, and has successfully specialized in obstetrics. He is a Fellow of the American College of Surgeons, a member of the New York Obstetrical Society and the Academy of Medicine, a trustee of the American Hospital of Istanbul, and consultant to the Stamford, Conn., and Huntington, Long Island, Hospitals; just to show that he is broad-minded, he is also president of the American Birth Control League. Dick's marriage to Dorothy Stewart occurred in 1927 and their four children are Frances (10), Richard N., Jr. (9), Stephen (7) and Stewart (1). When Dick is off duty in the summers, he may be found lolling about his place at Cold Spring Harbor, N. Y., or golfing on the adjacent links.

PITNEY, GUY SHELTON; R.F.D. No. 2, Morristown, N. J.: This famous and musical biographer of British royalty is a lawyer when he is not playing tennis or sailing, and is a partner in the firm of Pitney, Hardin and Skinner, 744 Broad St., Newark, N. J. He is also a director of the Morristown, N. J., Trust Co. Shel took his LL.B. from Harvard in 1917, and in 1918 married Etta Carrington Brown. They have three children, Shelton, Jr. (19), Mary Foster (17) and James Carrington (12); the oldest boy is Princeton '41. Shel is a member of the American, New Jersey and Essex County Bar Associations; during the war he was a major in the 313th Field Artillery.

PLIMPTON, RUSSELL A.; Minneapolis Museum of Art, Minneapolis, Minn.: When he took off his Field Artillery sergeant's chevrons, Russ donned the mantle of an assistant curator at the Metropolitan Museum of Art in New York City. This fitted him so well that he is now director of the Minneapolis Museum, achieving special fame in art circles by his development of the X-ray method of determining the authenticity of paintings. Russ has never married.

POTTER, CHARLES A., JR.; c/o Potter Estates, 1510 Chestnut St., Philadelphia, Pa.: As a first lieutenant with the 312th Field Artillery, Charlie evidently didn't get enough of France, and has continued to live there for most of the past ten years. His only active business interest is that of executor of his family's estates, which gives him plenty of opportunity to indulge in his hobbies of taking walking trips and painting what he sees thereon. He is a member of the Military Order of the World War, and the Sons of the American Revolution. Charlie married Margaret H. Spencer in 1914 and they have one son, Howard Spencer (23), who graduated from Penn State in '38, and is now at the Cornell School of Forestry and Conservation in the Class of 1940.

PUTTKAMMER, ERNST WILFRED; 1221 East 56th St., Chicago, Ill.: After getting his J.D. from the University of Chicago in 1917, Putt enlisted in the 311th Machine Gun Battalion. Having survived this suicide squad's activities, he naturally was not afraid of the mere civilian gunmen and gangsters who were so frequently shooting up his home town, and forthwith began to practise and preach legal restraint against these obnoxious gentry. As professor in the Chicago Law School, he specializes in criminal law, and is a director of the Chicago Crime Commission, Chicago Academy of Criminology and Citizens' Association of Chicago. He is a frequent speaker and writer on crime topics, and authored "Criminal Law and Procedure for Police," published in 1931 by the University of Chicago Press. Putt married Helen Monroe in 1931; a daughter, Helen Lorna (6), is a future Bryn Mawrette, and a son, Charles Wilfred (3), is destined to become Heermance fodder. Putt's more peaceful pursuits are stamp collecting and going native in the summer on Mackinac Island. Here he rides the bicycle he used in sophomore year and wears his freshman corduroy pants, two outstanding achievements of which he is excusably vain.

PYLE, GERALD J.; Greenville, Del.: Gretna Green is just around the corner from him, but so far Gerald has curbed his benedictine wanderlust and remains one of our few bachelors. After graduation he studied for the Episcopal ministry, taking a Columbia Master of Arts degree in his stride in 1916. But his studies stopped in 1917 when the U. S. went to war. Gerald went too—to the Marines—and helped clean up that fracas with the 2nd Regiment, as one of its captains. Gone now are the hot fevers of war, for Jerry now cools many parched throats as treasurer of his home town's thriving Westbrae Spring Water, Inc.

PYNE, H. RIVINGTON; River Road, Bedminster, N. J.: Riv still carries on the work in chemistry in which he was always so much interested, having stopped en route for a Ph.D. at Columbia. He has also turned his hand occasionally to literature with gratifying results, several of his poems having been selected for inclusion in The Second Book of Princeton Verse, edited by the late Henry Van Dyke. Riv rounds out a well-filled life by a healthy interest in politics, which won him a seat in the New Jersey House of Assembly, 1936-37-38. He married Florence Blair in 1916 and they have two boys, H. Rivington, Jr. (21), and J. Insley Blair (19); needless to say, both are in Princeton, in the classes of '40 and '42, respectively.

WHY, HOW YOU'VE CHANGED!

Since the University authorities got 1914 out of the way, they have had a good deal of spare time on their hands, and have utilized it by completing over thirty sizable building operations on the campus. The above map illustrates the up-to-date University geography with the changes and additions since June, 1914, indicated in solid black. Lack of space precludes showing all of the new Princeton layout; for instance, north of the Presbyterian Church lies the new Palmer Square and its Nassau Tavern which replaces the old Nass; southwest of the McCarter Theatre is the Princeton Inn; and farther west is the enlarged Grad College; the Hobey Baker Memorial Rink and the University's power plant are south of Brokaw Field; south of the Vivarium are the greenhouses and east of them, across Washington Road, is Fitzpatrick Field; south of this field are the Riding Hall, Gun Sheds and barracks of the Field Artillery R.O.T.C.; immediately to the east of Fitzpatrick Field is the Palmer Memorial Stadium and the Fitzpatrick Field House; east of the stadium is Laughlin Field and southeast of it the New Observatory. And most important of all, directly across Univ Place from Lockhart Hall is the 1914 Class House and our 25th Reunion Headquarters!

an active interest in Class affairs. In 1912 he obtained his A.B. from Westminster College and married Florence Sage; two years later he was made an LL.B. by Missouri University. He then went into banking in Miami, Oklahoma, but is now a counsellor for the Mutual Life Insurance Co. John is a member of the Sons of the American Revolution, Life Underwriters Association, Phi Delta Theta, Theta Nu Epsilon and Blue Lodge (chapter, commandery, consistory and shrine). The Ready children are Lieut. John T., Jr., U. S. Navy (24); William S. (19), who is a senior at Missouri, and Mary Kathryn (16).

REEVE, WILLIAM FOSTER, III; "Coolure," Newtown Square, Pa.: Fos is one of the great quintet of law school teachers, legal luminaries of which, or rather of whom, we can well and proudly boast. (With Professor Reeve at the University of Pennsylvania, Professor Blackburn at the University of Pittsburgh, Professor Puttkammer at the University of Chicago, Professor Bunn at the University of Wisconsin and Professor Miller at the Jefferson School of Law in Louisville, 1914 and the nation are well and scholarly served. As for the law-students, probably they do not realize how fortunate they are.) To show how really versatile our eminent men of the professoriate can be, it must also be recalled that Fos was a sergeant in the Medical Corps some twenty years ago, after receiving his LL.B. degree from Pennsylvania Law School in 1917. Fos was married to Kathleen H. Wilson in 1919; they have two sons, William F. W. (15) and Mark (10). He is a member of the Pennsylvania Bar Association, the American Bar Association, the Sons of the Revolution, and the American Law Institute; also of the Rose Tree Fox Hunt Club, and the Princeton Club of Philadelphia. In addition to his work at "The University," Fos is adviser to the American Law Institute on Trusts. The Institute is publishing a definitive series of text and reference books on the whole body or corpus of the law as it exists today, known as the "Re-Statement." The Pennsylvania supplement or annotation to the "Re-Statement of the Law of Trusts" comes from the gifted pen, or typewriter, of Barrister Reeve. Moreover, he takes time and thought to serve on the School Board of his township, having held said office since 1933, and for relaxation and diversion he takes to horses and foxhunting, thereby upholding the famous Philadelphia tradition of the chase, duly and lawfully engaged in and exercised by the aforesaid party of the first part.

RHOADS, BERNARD K.; 4 Luden Road, Albany, N. Y.: Bunny, alias "Dusty," has removed in these latter days from New York and New Rochelle to Albany. He is advertising manager for the New York Telephone Company, with offices at 158 State St., in the Capital City of the Empire State. After 1914, 1917 was Bunny's big year; he was married to Edythe B. Floyd, and he joined and honored the U. S. Signal Corps as first lieutenant. The only signal he gives now is to shout "fore" on the links. Our old reliable baseball man no longer disports himself upon the diamond, but the ancient and honorable game of golf gives him plenty of room for swing and sweep.

RICHARDS, GEORGE THOMAS, JR.; 2427 Hollis Road, Merwood, Upper Darby, Pa.: Following his release from his Air Service second lieutenancy, George married Irene H. Bates in 1922, and hung out his shingle as a consulting engineer; his office is in the Liberty Trust Building, Philadelphia. He also doubles as a photographer and/or golfer. The Richards children are George Thomas, III (15), consigned to Princeton '46, and Alice van Kirk (9).

RIKER, ADRIAN, JR.; 649 Lake St., Newark, N. J.: Adrian took an M.A. at Columbia and has since continued his research work in chemistry.

ROBERTS, WILLIAM PAXTON; EV Ranch, Kirby, Mont.: Being a Field Artillery captain in 1918 must have given Pax a yen for lots of room for riding and shooting, for he is now one of our leading exponents of the wide open spaces. At any rate, he is the only ranch owner on our rolls and when he is not urging little dogies to git along he is out shooting big game—or, in the interests of strict accuracy, shooting at big game. He also harvests crops of fossil remains for Guyot Hall and other bone bureaus. Pax married Gertrude Wicker in 1920 and his family corral now includes William Paxton, Jr. (11), and Caroline Denny (7). His other interests are concerned with the Montana Stockgrowers Association and the Elks Lodge of Sheridan, Wyo.

ROBERTSON, FREDERICK I.; 3333 Elsmere Road, Shaker Heights, Cleveland, Ohio: When Fred finished being a first lieutenant with the 62nd Field Artillery in the war, he turned to banking and is now vice-president of the Cleveland Trust Co. He has continued his participation in Princeton affairs, having served as president of the local alumni association, and at present holding down the job of treasurer of the Cleveland University Club. Other outside activities include Masonic interests, golf, carpentry and dog raising; Fred's spaniel pup "Huey P. Long of Elsmere" won the blue ribbon in a recent show of the Cocker Spaniel Club of Ohio. In 1934 Fred married Doris Byars and they are the proud parents not only of Martha (3), but also of Class Twins No. 5, James and Ellen (8 months).

ROBINSON, ALEXANDER C. III; 2706 Inverness Road, Cleveland, Ohio: In the war Alec served in the Adjutant General's office in Washington, and in 1918 married Marjory Woods; they have four children, Emma Jones (20), who is a sophomore at Vassar; Gertrude Marjory (18), a freshman at Wellesley; Alexander C., IV (12), who is promised to Princeton '48, and Sylvia Crane (9), who is not worrying about her educational future at all. Having taken his B. Arch. at Columbia in 1917, Alec has kept his drawing board and T-square busy ever since, and is now a partner in the Cleveland architectural firm of Garfield, Harris, Robinson & Schafer; he is past president of the local chapter of the American Institute of Architects, a member of the Architects Society of Ohio and has been one of the Cuyahoga County Planning Commission since 1934. Alec is also a trustee of the Cleveland School of Art and holds membership in the Foreign Affairs Council, Humane Society, Musical School Settlement and Maternal Health Clinic, all of Cleveland, and is prominent in the activities of the Princeton alumni in Ohio.

ROBINSON, GUY; Irvington-on-Hudson, N. Y.: If you're visiting the New York World's Fair and want the low-down on the best Midway shows to see, Guy is the guy for you as he is one of the Fair's advertising executives. During the war he was a first lieutenant in the 306th Cavalry, but since then has exchanged horses for dogs as a hobby, specializing in Sealey-hams; one of them won a championship in 1932. In the winters Guy goes completely Scotch as an expert curler, and was a member of the team (or "rink" as the Gaels have it) that won the Gordon International Curling Medal last year. Guy married Roane Beltzhoover (sister of our own Beltz) in 1920, and their children are Virginia Lee (17) and Ann Roane (13), both of whom wish they could go to Princeton.

ROBINSON, THOMAS H.; c/o U. S. Consulate General, Vancouver, B. C., Canada: Tom's first idea in life was to be a chemist and he took his B.S. in that subject at Lehigh in 1916. After the war, in which he served as first lieutenant with the 153rd Depot Brigade, he joined the Franklin Sugar Refining Company of Philadelphia, but eventually decided on a life career in the Consular Service. He served a long tour of duty in Australia, then was transferred to Mexico and has recently gone to Canada after a leave of absence spent abroad. He married Marian Irene Marks in 1924 and has one son, William Andrew (2 1/2), already in training for Princeton. Need it be said that swimming is still Tom's favorite sport?

ROGERS, NORMAN T.; 126 Sanbican Drive, Trenton, N. J.: Midge is one of our most apt disciples of Blackstone and as far back as 1919 was appointed Under Surrogate of Mercer County, N. J. He held this post until 1924 and in 1928 became Advisory Master in New Jersey's Court of Chancery; he continues to discharge the duties of this high office from the State House in Trenton. In 1916 Midge married Nancy Titus, and is now the proud father of Marion R. Walton (21), L. Harrison, II (17), and Norman T., Jr. (10); the two boys are headed for Princeton in the Classes of 1943 and 1950, respectively. When not advising masterfully in chancery Midge is a keen devotee of golf and sailing.

RUSSELL, A. D.; 2 East 70th St., New York, N. Y.

RUSSELL, BAXLEY B.; Hoopeston, Ill.

RYON, F. LINDE; 258 Redmond St., New Brunswick, N. J.: After war service as an ensign, Pat married Elisabeth B. Daret, and lived in Flushing, N. Y., before taking up his present residence on the banks of the old Raritan. His first marriage terminated in divorce, and in 1935 Pat married Mildred A. Gregory.

SAMPSON, EDWARD; Lafayette Road, Princeton, N. J.: Ed is the teller of the Princetonians of today how the world was made and how the Lord His sidewalks laid, as associate professor of geology. Married before the war, where he got away from geology as a first lieutenant in the Air Corps, to Alfreda Cope Lewis; they have two sons and a daughter. Edward, Jr. (20), enters Princeton's class of '42 this fall. The second boy, Harold Yarnall (18), is not yet decided where to go to college. Their daughter, Agnes, is 13. A Princeton "CI" in 1914, Ed stayed on to delve in ore deposits and tapped his brilliant if rocky way to the degrees of M. Sc. in '15 and D. Sc. in '20. He became an assistant geologist of the U. S. Geological Survey in 1920 and two years later was made associate geologist. His writing on mineral resources, the geology of ore deposits and on microscopic studies of ore minerals have been numerous and brilliant. And not without practical results Sampson-wise, for he is a director of the Salt Dome Oil Corporation—and one whom the SEC can delight to honor as knowing his domes and his oil. When not geologizing, he hobbies in ornithology, in his family and in the low-down on Princeton.

SCOTT, T. A.; Metropolitan Club, Washington, D. C.: We have had no word from Scotty for several years, our last information being to the effect that he was in banking in Washington. He had served as a captain of Coast Artillery in the war, married Rebekah Wilmer and had two children, Miriam Douglas and Wilmer.

SHACKELFORD, JR., W. T.; Earl Court Apartments, Baltimore, Md.: Bill served during the war as second lieutenant, Air Corps, and most of the time since he has spent in Baltimore. His marriage to Louise S. Scull took place in 1929. As a partner in W. T. Shackelford & Co., Chamber of Commerce Building, Baltimore, Bill's efforts are devoted to carrying on the insurance business. Spare time is taken up with riding.

SCHMIDT, JOHN B.; Box 2, Rm. 1369, 111 W. Washington St., Chicago, Ill.

SHAW, HAROLD D. V.; 27 Linden Ave., Jersey City, N. J.: After the late (?) unpleasantness, in which he served with the 104th Signal Battalion, Harold went into banking. He married Helen MacKay in 1919 and, after her death, married Helen Frost in 1936. He has two daughters, Susan Vreeland (18), who is a sophomore at Connecticut College, and Jane MacKay (15), who will be Swarthmore '44.

SHENK, WILBUR J.; 2914 Manchester Road, Shaker Heights, Cleveland, Ohio: The steel warehouse and fabricating firm of Paterson-Leitch Co. of Cleveland is vice-presidented by Rip, who got in trim for his executive duties by a term as president of the Northern Ohio Alumni Association. (Incidentally, Fred Robertson and Tim Graham have also held that office.) In 1917 Rip married Margaret MacDonald and now has two children, Wilbur J., Jr. (20), who is Princeton '41, and Barbara (17), who is a Junior College freshman. Rip maintains his football physique by golfing, his favorite opponents, as usual, being Yale men. In the war, Rip was Captain Shenk, 319th Engineers.

SHENSTONE, ALLAN GOODRICH; 111 Mercer St., Princeton, N. J.: As a Canadian, Shen naturally beat most of the rest of us into the war and ended up as a captain of the 54th Field

Co., Royal Engineers, picking up the British Military Cross for valor on the way. Since then he has devoted himself to advanced mathematics and physics, now holding the professorship that goes with the Class of 1909 Chair of Physics in Princeton; he is also secretary of the University's Department of Physics and conducts two undergrad and two grad courses in the subject. Shen took his M.A. at Princeton in 1920, went to England for his Cambridge B.A. in 1921, came back to Nassau Hall for a Ph.D. in 1922 and returned to Cambridge for an M.A. in 1935. Nevertheless, he found time to marry Molly Chadwick in 1923 and they have one son, Michael (10). Shen is a member of the American Physical Society and the German ditto and has contributed a score of scientific articles to various publications. Stamp collecting is a favorite hobby of his and he is also an enthusiastic golfer and tennis player.

SHERARD, J. B.; 55 Lake Shore Road, Detroit, Mich.

SHRODER, RALPH; 39 Moss Ave., Detroit, Mich.

SLAYMAKER, SAMUEL E., JR.; Harrison Road, Ithaca, Pa.: Since the completion of his war time duties as an airplane inspector, Sam has kept his feet very much on the ground and is now office manager of the investment brokerage firm of Auchincloss, Parker & Redpath, in Philadelphia. In 1918 he married Eugenia Barrie and their children are Samuel E., III (17), who is at St. Paul's and enters Princeton next year; Eugenia (13), at Shipley, and R. Barrie (10), at Haverford. Sam is one of the foremost playing-members of the Philadelphia Racquet Club, winning several squash championships, and is also an ardent and successful golfer, though he modestly lists his accomplishments in that respect as being "recognized as a good first tee trader"; his other hobby is coin collecting. Ever since graduation Sam has been active in Princeton and Class affairs, and served as Class secretary from 1924 until ill health (fortunately temporary) caused his resignation in 1926.

sional engineer, Al and Elleta Marie Spangler were married in 1915, and still are in Al's old home town of Columbus, Ga. Their three children, John Alexander (17), Laura May (15) and Thomas Hayward (9), attend Columbus High, Sullins College and Columbus Grade School in the order listed. Al is superintendent of the Columbus Water Works, is interested in the Kiwanis and Elks and serves on the executive board of the local Boy Scouts.

SMITH, J. KELLOGG; Chestertown, Md.: Following graduation JK took his M.E. at Stevens Institute in 1916; during the war he was connected with government shipbuilding. His current interests are in farming, and camp and school work. In 1917 JK married Margaret Shearer and they have four children: Joan Kellogg (18), who is in the class of '40 at Bennington; Peter Kellogg (17) and Hartley Kellogg and Barbara Kellogg (14).

SPALDING, EDWARD DEAN; 251 Boston Blvd. E., Detroit, Mich.: College wrestler and strong man, 1st lieutenant, Medical Corps, during the war, and now a physician with offices at 662 Maccabee Building, Detroit, Ed and Miss Rosenheim were married in 1924 and have three children, Edward F. (11), Florence A. (10) and Harriet (3). Ed studied at Johns Hopkins and received his M.D. there in 1918. Part of his own time now is devoted to teaching, being professor of clinical medicine, Wayne University Medical School. His affiliations include A. M. A., American College of Physicians, and Detroit Academy of Medicine.

SPEERS, PETER CARTER; Forman Christian College, Lahore, India: Though never a broad jumper on the track team, Pete took a long leap after graduation and landed in India as a missionary attached to the Punjab Mission of the Presbyterian Board of Foreign Missions. He was assigned as a teacher of chemistry to the Forman Christian College at Lahore, where he has remained ever since; he is now professor of technical chemistry and director of the Technical Chemistry Laboratory of that institution. He is also a Fellow of the university and a member of the Science, Engineering and Agricultural faculties, besides being convener of the Board of Studies in Chemistry. Besides his professorial duties, Pete has been extremely active in supervising a new building program for his university, which will reestablish it on the basis of a modern residential college with up-to-date buildings and equipment. He not only originated the scheme, but has raised the necessary funds, attended to all the real estate operations involved, checked the architectural plans, and designed and installed the water and electric systems and sewage and disposal plants, and directed the actual construction of buildings and roads. Outside of that he acts as his own typist, draughtsman, calculator and what have you. Under the circumstances it is no wonder that Princeton honored herself by awarding Pete an honorary M. Sc. in 1934. In his spare time he plays golf (handicap, 14), and works with the local Red Cross committee in its anti-tuberculosis campaigns. Pete reports that he is "an enthusiastic diabetic" and was never as fit as he has been since getting the disease. To quote him further: "I got the idea at our 20th Reunion that beer has value for a diabetic, since when I have done considerable work on the subject. By adding beer to my diet I have been able to reduce the amount of insulin I have to take by about half. Add this to the credit of Reunions—and wet ones. It has led me to a new theory of diabetes which is getting more clinical and laboratory support daily. A Scots doctor came along the other day and said, 'I say, Speers, can't you think up some good use for wusky?'" Pete married Margery Smith in 1920, and they now have four youngsters: Peter Carter, Jr. (18), who is preparing at the Hill School for Princeton '44; Constance (14), Margery Ellen (13) and Michael Frederick (7). Unfortunately, Pete is not going to get back for the 25th, but it is pleasing to learn that he will probably be home again in 1940.

SPENCER, MARCUS ACHESON; 14 Addison Gardens, Kensington, London W 14, England: Mark went from Princeton to the Union Theological Seminary and got his B.D. there in 1917. Meanwhile he took time off in 1916 to marry Ella Helen Ross. He has three daughters—Mary Campbell (21), who is at Girton College, Cambridge, Class of 1940; Adeline Curry (18) and Marcella Macalister (9). Mark is pastor of St. John's Presbyterian Church, which is at Scarsdale Villas, Kensington, London W 8. Photography is the dominie's favorite way of diverting himself.

STARBUCK, EDGAR D., JR.; 94 Lake Ave., Saratoga Springs, N. Y.: Ed returned to his home grounds after taking his last hike as an Infantry lieutenant, and is now one of the leading citizens of the country's foremost spa. His chief business activity is being president of the mercantile firm of E. D. Starbuck & Co., Inc., with side lines as director of the Saratoga National Bank and the Hawley Home for Children, and membership on the executive board of the Saratoga County Boy Scouts. Ed is also affiliated with the N. Y. State National Guard Reserve, American Legion, Saratoga Rotary Club, Rising Sun Chapter 131, R. M. A., Rising Sun Lodge 103, F. and A. M., Washington Commandery No. 33, K. T., and Saratoga Lodge of Elks 161. In addition to having all the Saratoga spring water he wants to drink, Ed further assures his health by skiing, sailing, fishing and golf under the aegises of the McGregor Links, Adirondack Mountain Club and the Lake George Association. Through all this, however, he has never met anyone he wanted to be Mrs. Starbuck.

STEARNS, JOHN N., JR.; Glen Head, N. Y.: After serving as a Navy ensign in the well-known war, Jack is now connected with the brokerage firm of Shearson, Hammill & Co., 14 Wall St., New York City, as an investment consultant. He has also found time to keep up his golf, winning the Long Island championship in 1923 and various club tournaments; in addition, he is deeply interested in local community affairs, having served as clerk of the Village of Upper Brookville, N. Y., in 1937-38, and is now a trustee of the same municipality. Jack married Alice Cudahy in 1931 and they have one son, Peter Cudahy (6), who will probably be teeing off at the Princeton Golf Club in the class of 1955.

STEVENSON, ALEXANDER RUSSELL, JR.; 6 Union St., Schenectady, N. Y.: Alex was one of 1914's longest hold-outs from matrimony, but in 1934 he married Helene Elink Schuurman, and now has two children, Mary Kennedy (3) and Alexander Russell, 3rd (1½). Alex learned aviation as first lieutenant in the Air Corps during the war and ever since has continued that interest, having his own plane which he uses both for business and pleasure trips. Following his C.E. degree at Princeton, he secured his M.S. at Union in 1915 and Ph.D. in 1917, and as staff assistant to the vice-president of the General Electric Co. in Schenectady has contributed largely to the research of that company and to the development of new products. For instance, you have Alex to thank for your electric ice-box.

STINSON, JAMES E.; Chamber of Commerce Bldg., Worcester, Mass.

STOCKTON, GILCHRIST BAKER; 3407 Pine St., Jacksonville, Fla.: Gic went abroad shortly after graduation and in 1917 took his B.A. at Oxford. He went back for an M.A. in 1927 and then, trans-Atlantic travel having become something of a habit, returned in 1930 as Envoy Extraordinary and Minister Plenipotentiary to what was then Austria. Gic successfully discharged the important duties of this high office until 1933, when he came home to engage in business for himself. He is now president of the Ortega Real Estate Co., in Jacksonville, a member of the Florida Real Estate Board and president-elect of the Jacksonville Real Estate Board, also holding a position of influence in the councils of the local Democratic party. Gic was married to Mildred Churchwell in 1925 and their children are Mildred Churchwell (11) and Gilchrist Baker, Jr. (8), the latter getting set for Princeton. Gic's favorite hobby, next to politics, is boating, but he found time to write "The Two-thirds Rule," an authoritative addition to legislative literature published by the Record Co. in 1928.

STOCKTON, KENNETH EVANS; 830 Linwood Ave., Ridgewood, N. J.: Ken entered Columbia Law School after graduation and received his LL.B. thereat in 1917. During the war he served as a private in the Motor Transport Corps. In 1921 he married Susette Brevoort. For several years Ken was abroad in the interests of the International Telephone and Telegraph Co., and is now one of the vice-presidents of that organization. His favorite sport is golf, once winning the toss when tied for last place in a one-club tournament. Ken has four children: Susette (14), Anne Elizabeth (13), Charles William, II (11), and Mary (3).

STREBEL, GEORGE E.; 90 Knowlton Ave., Kenmore, Buffalo, N. Y.

STUART, HAROLD C.; 116 Warren St., Brookline, Mass.: Harold served in the Medical Corps, received his M.D. from the College of Physicians and Surgeons, Columbia University, and was married to Agnes Brown, all in the year 1918. They have a daughter, Eleanor, age 14. A nationally known pediatric authority, his book, "Healthy Childhood," was published by D. Appleton-Century Co. in 1933. Harold is now assistant professor of pediatrics and child hygiene in charge of child hygiene, Harvard School of Public Health, Harvard University, 55 Shattuck St., Boston, Mass. He holds honorary membership in Alpha Omega Alpha (Medical) and Delta Omega (Public Health) fraternities, is a director of Center for Research in Child Development, Harvard School of Public Health, lecturer at Simmons College, School of Social Work, Boston, and Forsythe Dental Infirmary, chairman of Society for Research in Child Development, representative of American Academy on "American Board of Pediatrics" and a director, New England Grenfell Association. He is also a member of advisory committees of numerous medical and research associations. Fishing and hiking are Harold's only antidotes for all the work listed above.

STUMP, HERMAN A.; R.F.D. Owings Mills, Baltimore County, Md.: When the war broke out, Stu broke into it as a first lieutenant in the 2nd U. S. Regular cavalry. After he hung up his curry comb for the last time he returned to Baltimore and entered the insurance business; he is now the proprietor of his own brokerage agency of Stump, Rossman & Co., Baltimore. Stu married Priscilla R. Dawson in 1921 and has two youngsters, A. Herman, Jr. (13), and Dawson (11), who have as yet made no public statement of their intended college. When not busy signing up the local preferred risks, Stu prefers golf to any other activity.

SWINFORD, JEROME; 30 Fifth Ave., New York City: In spite of teaching the soft cadences of the music muse in a female college, Jerry remains one of 1914's few bachelors. The Music Department of Sarah Lawrence College, in Bronxville, N. Y., claims Jerome's main attentions and intentions. Aside from his professorial activities, he teaches music to (we presume) non-collegians, and is also one who can well and ably practice his own teachings; he is a concert baritone, much in demand. That mellifluous voice which once charmed even undergraduates in the old Triangle Club days is now most acceptably heard in recitals in New York and elsewhere, and is, we are given to understand, both by hearsay and direct evidence, continuing to receive very favorable comment. Aside from golf, Jerry knows no other love.

TAEUSCH, CARL FREDERICK; 3514 Macomb St., Washington, D. C.: Fritz won his Ph.D. at Harvard in 1920 and became an instructor at the University of Chicago; later he transferred his professorial activities back to Cambridge. His bent for public administrative study landed him, in 1935, on Uncle Sam's payroll as chief of the Program Study and Discussion Section of the U. S. Department of Agriculture. He married Mary Haman in 1914 and has three children. His oldest, Frederick Leonard (23), entered Princeton with the Class of '37, but later transferred to Annapolis, where he is now a fourth classman; Mary Carolyn (21) is at Vassar and Barbara Joan (15) is at home. Fritz is a member of the American Philosophical Association, American Economic Association and the National Economic Council; his honorary societies are Phi Beta Kappa, Delta Epsilon Rho and Delta Tau Delta. With all this, Fritz has still found time to write "Professional Business Ethics," Henry Holt,, 1927, and "Policy and Ethics in Business," McGraw-Hill, 1932, and indulge his hobby of model house building.

TATNALL, H. CHACE; "Latches," Whitemarsh, Pa.: Chace served as first lieutenant with the 11th Regular cavalry during the war, and afterwards naturally gravitated into the City Troop of Philadelphia. This is important because, due to that organization's retention of the ranks of its Revolutionary beginnings, Chace soon became the only living Cornet in captivity. In 1926 he married Elizabeth Jeanes, and their children are Sheila (11) and Chace, Jr. (8), who has it all figured out that he will be Princeton '52. Chace is connected with the Philadelphia brokerage firm of Cassatt & Co., and is a member of the Philadelphia Bond Club. His chief recreational activities are concerned with farming and horses.

THOMAS, KENNETH CHAMPION; Interlaken, N. J.: Ken's announced ambition in June '14 was to be a lawyer, but today finds him a successful novelist; how successful, may be gathered from the fact that English critics have dubbed him "the American Galsworthy." Ken's books, all of which received their first publication in England, are: "Brownstone and Ivory" (1929), "Scarlet on Snow" (1932), "The Dark Castle" (1932), "Echoes in the Dark" (1933), "The Bright To-morrow" (1937) and "The Orange Lagoon" (1938). In 1921 Ken married Mary Eskew and they have one daughter, Beatrice Suzanne (10). He was a member of the crew of the famed Leviathan during her war transport service. Of course Ken's favorite occupation is writing, but he also states that he still likes to stay up all night in police stations and enjoys Yale football teams just as little as he did while an undergraduate. For further recreation he takes a deep interest in the Monmouth Players, of which Mrs. Thomas is a director.

TIPPETTS, WILLIAM B.; 7300 14th St., South, St. Petersburg, Fla.: Bill was made an LL.B. by Harvard in 1917, but did nothing further about it until after he had finished being a Quartermaster officer in the war. Then he hung out his own legal shingle and has achieved a position of prominence and influence in state as well as local work. Bill is a past president of the St. Petersburg Bar Association and past master of St. Petersburg Lodge No. 139, F. and A. M., and is a life member and counsel of the St. Petersburg Memorial Historical Society; he is also vice-president and attorney of the American Legion Hospital for Crippled Children, attorney for the Katherine Payne Beach Home for Convalescent Children, attorney for the Home Owners Loan Corporation and trustee and attorney of the local Y. W. C. A. Politically, Bill is extremely active in the interests of the Democratic party, now serving his fourth term as chairman of the Pinellas County Democratic Executive Committee and having been temporary secretary of the first Roosevelt organization in Florida in 1931; his other organizational connections include the Sons of the American Revolution, the Society of Puritan Descendants, the Army and Navy and Jeffersonian Clubs, and the Lakewood Country Club, where he specializes in catching tarpon. Bill married Belle O'Neal in 1932 and their son, Billy (4), is going to Princeton when he grows up.

TWELVETREES, FREDERIC ROWLAND; 50 Burroughs Drive, Snyder (Buffalo), N. Y.: Barrister Twelvetrees practices in Buffalo, New York, at No. 1918 Liberty Bank Building, as a member of the firm of Falk, Phillips, Twelvetrees and Falk, and he graces the State and National Bar Associations with his membership. Fred was married in 1924. His lesser affiliations include the Masonic fraternity, the Country Club of Buffalo, and the Saturn Club of the same metropolis. Frederic was a captain, the captain in fact, of the 152nd Depot Brigade, during the World War. Needless to relate, he looked after all depots with his customary distinction; no widows and orphans who hung around the railroad stations of France were lacking in courteous attention and sympathy if Fred was there. In these presumably piping days of peace Fred engages, when not immersed in the practice of law, in golf and bowling, and that, no doubt, to the discomfiture of his opponents, any and all, come who may.

THE CLASS BOY

ASHBEL T. WALL, III; Haverford Mansions, Haverford, Pa.: Young Bant was born on March 8, 1915, and made his first official appearance as a Princetonian in 1919, when he threw in the ball to start the Yale game at our 5th Reunion. He graduated from Princeton in 1937, and on July 1 of that year was married to Frederica Poor at Narragansett, R. I. He is with the firm of Grinnell Co., Inc., in Philadelphia.

VAN COURT, ALBERT E.; 2050 Monterey Road, South Pasadena, Cal.: From the far-off shores of the Pacific, "by the shining big sea water," come in returns from Van, whose son, Albert E., Jr. (18½), is a member of the Princeton class of 1941. Thus the continent is spanned, and New Jersey linked to California by bonds which none can sever. Van was married in 1917 to Miriam Vail. Another class golfer, he also fancies dogs and raises them as well. He has taken prizes with his Dachshunds in Pacific Coast competition and exhibitions. Look for him and his hounds at the next exposition out there. They'll be right on top, as usual. In sterner moments, Albert is vice-president of the Investment Bankers Association of America. He is, in fact, an investment banker, and, as such, necessarily to be greatly envied by his more impecunious classmates. The vice-presidency of William R. Staats Company in Los Angeles also claims him. It is this organization, at 640 S. Spring St., which is his home corporation grounds. Van is identified with the California Club of Los Angeles (which, to our untutored mind, sounds like painting the lily), and is, moreover, a member of the Medwick Country Club of the City of Angels. He was a captain, during the World War, with the 328th Field Artillery.

VARDELL, CHARLES G., JR.; Salem College, Winston-Salem, N. C.: As soon as Charley finished his war-time Y. M. C. A. work, he plunged back into music and was appointed dean of the Music Department of the Flora MacDonald College, Red Springs, N. C. Later he became dean of Salem College in Winston-Salem, and last year was granted a year's leave of absence for special work in the Music Department of the University of Rochester, N. Y., where he obtained his M.A. Besides his academic and other duties as a church organist and choir director, Charley has done considerable composing; in 1924 his piano piece, "Concert Gavotte," appeared; in 1925 a song, "Dark Days or Fair"; in 1929 a cantata, "The Inimitable Lovers"; in 1932 the anthem, "A Christmas Evocation," and in 1937 an organ composition, "Skyland," and an orchestral piece, "Joe Clark Steps Out." In 1938 Charley completed his first symphony, "Carolinian," which, although still in manuscript form, was given its initial rendition last spring by the Eastman School of Music orchestra. Charley married Eleanor Ferrill in 1920 and they have one daughter, Margaret Ferrill (17), in the class of '42 at Salem. Dean Vardell is a member of the National Association of Schools of Music and the Music Teachers' National Association.

VAUGHAN, ROBERT E.; 212 W. Main St., Crawfordsville, Ind.

VINCENT, RICHARD G., 115 Overlook Ave., Boonton, N. J.: Dick remains, as of yore, an honored and respected member of his native community. His marriage in 1917, to Elizabeth Hutchinson, was later dissolved by divorce, and, in 1935, Mildred Wintermute became Mrs. Richard G. Vincent. Dick's two daughters, Betty Virginia (20) and Dorothy Joan (18), are doing their old man proud; the former is a student at Antioch College. Richard, himself, is a salesman, allied with the Restland Memorial Park of Hanover, New Jersey. The 331st Field Artillery, U. S. A., gave Second Lieutenant Vincent his start in things military. Needless to relate, it was far from being his finish. Dick nowadays belongs to the American Legion and to the United Commercial Travelers.

VOORHEES, W. WALTER; 634 West State St., Trenton, N. J.: The next time your New Jersey motor trip is held up by a particularly bad detour, you can write to Hees about it, for he is Resident Engineer for the N. J. State Highway Department, at Trenton, N. J. Having served a war-time hitch as a Field Artillery corporal, he naturally became interested in smoother roads for the caissons to go rolling along (keep 'em rolling), and his present vocation is the result. When he's not engineering, he's usually golfing. Hees married Elizabeth Brown in 1919; they have no children.

VROMAN, JOHN C.; Manzanola, Col.: Our smiling young man on the flying trapeze continued his aerial flights for a while after graduation as a cadet in the Air Corps, and then made a 3-point landing in farming, livestock and investments in his home town. John has always maintained a lively interest in civic activities through the Farmers' Union and the local Chamber of Commerce; from 1921 to 1922 he served as a representative in the Colorado State Legislature. He is also a Mason, Knight Templar and American Legionnaire, and retains his old-time athletic form via the Denver Country Club, Cheyenne Mountain Country Club of Colorado Springs and the Everglades Club of Palm Beach. John still persists in remaining unmarried.

WALL, ASHBEL T., JR.; 145 Blackstone Blvd., Providence, R. I.: Bant and Mary H. Brooks were married in 1914 and they have raised and are raising their boys to go to Princeton, Ashbel T., III (23) (1914's Class Boy), class of 1937; F. Brooks (20), 1941, and John W. (12), 1947 (approx.). Following war service as first lieutenant, Ordnance, Bant returned to the manufacturing business and is now president and treasurer of A. T. Wall & Co., Providence, R. I., and Newall Mfg. Co., Chicago, Ill., and also a director of the Clifford Real Estate Co. and the Mechanics National Bank, both of Providence. Outside of business he is active in the Community Fund, Social Agencies and Social Service Exchange. Although tennis and yachting are reputedly Bant's chief forms of recreation, it is hard to believe that baseball does not still come in for consideration.

WALLER, EARLL COLDEN, JR.; 2249 Walton Way, Augusta, Ga.: The sunny South now claims Earll as an adopted son, where he is in the sales department of Goodhart, McAuliffe & Co., and engages in farming as a hobby. In 1917 he married Eva Berrien Carpenter and they have a daughter and two sons, Ruth Berrien (20), a senior at the University of Georgia; Earll Colden, Jr. (18), Princeton '42, and John Elijah (16), who is heading for Old Nassau.

WALLER, HARCOURT E.; 2249 Walton Way, Augusta, Ga.: Harry was a shave-tail with the Field Artillery during the war and has since continued his interest in national affairs by being commander of Georgia Post 4 of the American Legion and chairman of the local chapter of the American Red Cross. He married Josephine C. Carpenter in 1917, and their two sons are Samuel Carpenter (20), who is Princeton '40, and Harcourt E., Jr. (16), who will be Princeton '44. He also has three nephews at Old Nassau. The Sun Life Assurance Co. of Canada claims Harry as its district solicitor, and he is a member of the Life Underwriters' Association.

WALLOWER, HERBERT HOOVER; 5 College Circle, Haverford, Pa.: Migrating from his native haunts in Harrisburg to Joplin, Miss., Baxter Springs, Kan., Leadville, Col., et al., Herb has returned to Pennsylvania (the state, not the university), and is living at Haverford, whence easy access to Princeton makes up for the long, lean years when he was too far away from New Jersey. He is president of the Ferrocon Sales Corporation, Architects Building, Philadelphia, and therein and thereby exercises his well-known capabilities and capacities as a mining engineer, with especial reference to the sales and construction of steel houses. These, we are happily led to believe, are not prison cells, nor yet funerary vaults, nor even army dug-outs, but edifices for home and office use, as steps ahead into the unknowable future. Herbert is the husband of Dora Wickersham Coe (having been wed since 1919), and the father of four sons, William Bryson (18), who expects to attend Princeton; Herbert Hoover, Jr. (16), who has decided on Cornell; Edward Z. (14), and Robert Coe (9). Herb is a member of the Masonic fraternal order and of the American Institute of Mining Engineers, and the American Military Engineers. He was a first lieutenant in the 29th Engineers in 1917-18. He keeps up nowadays with horses, hunting, and camping.

WATSON, ROY GARRETT; 420 Lovett Blvd., Houston, Tex.: Roy's natural interests were in newspaper work and, after leaving Princeton, he joined the staff of the Houston Post, owned by his father. He advanced to the combined posts of president and publisher of the organization and then retired to devote himself to the interests of Christian Science. He is now a practitioner in the Church, and serves on the Christian Science Committee on Publications for the State of Texas, when he is not engaged in his favorite sport of traveling. Roy has never married.

WEIDIG, JACOB K., 266 Montclair Ave., Newark, N. J.: J. K. is in the manufacturing business in Newark, as he has been for a good many years, and is associated with The Keratol Company, at No. 348 Van Buren St., in the capacity of vice-president, treasurer and general manager. He is also director and vice-president of Chas. Cooper and Company, likewise of Newark. Jacob was married in 1920 to Anna Bultman, and they have three children, David P. (17), J. Peter (15) and Ann (14). In addition to being the head (all wives please notice) of such a fine family, he is a member of the Newark Athletic Club. J. K. enjoys and engages in golf, tennis, surf fishing and sailing.

WEINGARTEN, MILTON O.; 43 Fielding Court, South Orange, N. J.: Milt and Irene Stein were married in 1916, since which time he has been kept busy building up an insurance business, raising a family and playing golf. Their three children are Carol (20), Tom (15) and Ilene (11). Milt is vice-president of C. J. Simons & Co., insurance, 14 Park Place, Newark, N. J.

WELLS, HOWARD MYERS; 1817 Hillside Ave., East Cleveland, Ohio: Speed began to live up to his nickname as soon as possible after graduation by whisking off to war work in Russia, as a Y. M. C. A. secretary. When that exciting duty was over, he came home, married Beatrice Crowell in 1919, and entered the ministry. For some time he was pastor of the First Congregational Church in Bloomfield, N. J., his present charge being the First Congregational Church in East Cleveland. Speed got his D.D. two years ago at Wooster College, Ohio. For two years he was a member of the School Board, Old Lyme, Conn., and continues his civil interests in his present location, being a Mason, a member of the East Cleveland Civil Service Commission and a director of the Cleveland Humane Society, Woodland Community Center and East Cleveland Y. M. C. A. Speed has three children, Janet (17), who is a freshman at Smith, and Howard (14) and Bradford (11), who are headed for Nassau Hall. His favorite avocations are golf, mountain climbing, and travel, in which he should be able to indulge simultaneously.

WESSON, DAVID MOORE; c/o Guaranty Trust Cie, Bruxelles, Belgium: Instead of the usual American olive drab, Dave wore the horizon blue of a sous-lieutenant of the French Army during the war, and won a Croix de Guerre while doing it. He returned to this country for a time and engaged in some hydro-electric projects for the Southern California Edison Co., but the call of onion soup and frogs' legs became too strong and he recrossed the ocean. He now lives la vie á la Monsieur Reilly in France and Belgium, where he has nothing to do but sit in the sun and philosophize, go fishing and collect stamps. Dave's hobby of philately won him first and second prizes at the International Philatelique Exposition in Nice, in 1931. It's Nice work if you can get it. It would seem to be the ideal existence for a bachelor, which is fortunate, because that is what Dave still is.

WHEELER, S. BOWMAN; Rosemont, Pa.: Bo is still true to the City of Brotherly Love, and is constantly engaged in getting other people to share his enthusiasm for it through his activities as a broker with the real estate firm of Hirst and MacFarland, 1528 Walnut St., Philadelphia. At other times his hobbies are tennis or squash, depending on the weather conditions at the Merion Cricket Club (where cricket is seldom, if ever, played). Bo's marriage in 1924 to Theodora K. Lillie was terminated by divorce; his children are S. Bowman, III (14), who will be Princeton '47, and Jean Lillie (12), who will be Bryn Mawr '50 or know the reason why.

WHITLOCK, JOHN ROBERT; 14 Valley View Ave., Summit, N. J.: Not having had enough of motor trucks as a first lieutenant with the machine gun company of the 319th Infantry during the war, Bob is now an automotive tycoon in his own behalf, as owner and operator of the Federal Motor Truck Co. and the General Truck Repair Co., both of Paterson, N. J. His first marriage, to Gertrude McEwan in 1920, terminated in divorce, and in 1927 he married Gertrude Williams; Bob has two children, Barbara Hunt (10) and Millicent Clark (6). From 1928 to 1931 he was a member of the Common Council of Summit, and is a past master of Overlook Lodge No. 163, F. & A. M. Bob confesses to a predilection for bridge, but in the same breath hastens to add that he "is no expert."

WIGTON, EDWARD NEWTON; 74 Beechknoll Road, Forest Hills, N. Y.: Ned served in the Regular army during the war, receiving wounds which caused his retirement to the inactive list. He is now vice-president of the Morrisdale Coal Mining Co., 17 Battery Place, New York City. Ned is also an enthusiastic and expert yachtsman; he belongs to the North American Yacht Racing Union and the Huntington Yacht Club, and his prowess at the tiller has won him so many trophies that he is constantly sought as a collaborator by authorities and designers in the world of boats. In 1919 Ned married Kathleen Roberts, who has since died, and his children are Kathleen (18) and Joan (14).

WILLIAMS, JOHN L. B.; 366 Carteret Place, Orange, N. J.: John stayed on in Princeton in the luxury of the Grad College until he got his M.A. in 1915. Then he joined the publishing house of D. Appleton (now the Appleton-Century Co.) in New York, where, except for his war service vacation, he has remained ever since. At present John is the presiding editorial genius of the place, collecting authors at home and abroad, and suavely wielding a wicked blue pencil on unknowns and best sellers alike. He is also a trustee of the Orange Public Library and counts that day lost whose low descending sun doesn't see him busy on his hobby of gardening. John is Goldsmith's and Beebe's chief ally in our bachelor brotherhood of northern New Jersey.

WILSON, D. E. JOHNSTON; 710 S. W. St. Clair Ave., Portland, Ore.: Johnnie's next stop after Princeton, N. J., was Cambridge, Mass., where he collected an LL.B. in 1917. He then returned to his native Portland to practise what the law professors had been preaching. He is now Assistant Oregon State Counsel for the Home Owners' Loan Corporation in Portland; from 1923 to 1924 he was a member of the Child Welfare Commission. Johnnie's marriage to Constance L. Carter in 1923 terminated in divorce. He has two children, Connie Lee (14) and David J. (10).

WINANTS, FRANK H.; Stevenson, Md.: Pete fittingly celebrated the year 1914 by getting married, his wife being the former Dorothy Rowland; they have two children, Dorothy R. (23) and James M. (22). During the war Pete was an ensign in the Navy, but left the ocean behind him as soon as possible, and has now retired to the peace of rural Maryland. Photography is a continuing avocation of his and many of the illustrations in this book, as well as various scenes in the movies of our past Reunions, are from Pete's facile cameras.

WOOD, WILLIAM NICHOLAS; 4614 Chevy Chase Blvd., Chevy Chase, Md.: After the war, in which he was a second lieutenant with the 47th Air Squadron, Bill married Byna Dorothy Garnel and entered business in Akron, O. That was in 1919. Later, Bill decided he'd rather be a lawyer, so took his LL.B. degree at George Washington University in 1925. His older daughter, Kathryn Crosby (18), is now a student in George Washington and his younger girl, Margaret Lynn (14), is headed that way. Bill is still fond of hunting and fishing, but tennis now replaces baseball in his athletic affections.

WOLF, WALTER J.; 1085 Park Ave., New York City: Our former Gym Team captain and concert master of the Triangle Orchestra never became a performer with either Barnum and Bailey or the New York Philharmonic, as was freely prophesied at graduation, but contented himself with being a successful lawyer instead. He obtained his LL.B. at Columbia in 1917, toyed with mal de mer as an ensign on U. S. S. Wilhelmina during the war, and is now a partner in the legal firm of Wolf and Kohn, 270 Madison Ave., New York City. Walter's wife, the former Clara Louise Myers, whom he married in 1930, died in 1936. He is a member of the Bar Association of the City of New York and the New York County Lawyers Association, and plays golf madly at the Century Country Club. Walter keeps up his interest in Princeton through membership in the Princeton Club of New York and active participation in Class affairs; he served several terms as chairman of the Mid-winter Dinner Committee and has been on the Executive Committee of the Class for three years.
